The first extra-care council homes in Camden

Artist's impression of the new Charlie Ratchford Centre

In early 2019, construction will start on 38 new extra-care homes in Chalk Farm for older people who need support to live independently. The new Charlie Ratchford Centre will be the first extra-care council homes funded by the Community Investment Programme.

Residents of the new homes, located on Crogsland Road, will be council tenants with their own front door and homes for

The way you pay for your water is changing

If you are a council tenant, you will have seen in your last rent statement that the way you pay for your water is changing from April 2019.

Thames Water want to collect their own water charges and this means that from April 2019 you must pay them directly for your life, with the care and support they need to live independently available onsite. There will be a shared garden, ground floor lounge and dining areas where residents can socialise.

The centre will also provide a new base for Camden Carers Service (CCS), an organisation that provides support services to improve the quality of life and wellbeing for carers in Camden.

Allegra Lynch, CEO of Camden Carers Centre said "We're very excited about the building work on the new Charlie Ratchford Centre. We're looking forward to moving into our new offices and making use of the space to encourage carers to make time for themselves; supporting them to maintain their own health and wellbeing."

Once the new building is complete, the CCS will move out of its current offices in the old Charlie Ratchford Centre on Belmont Street, a site that will also see redevelopment.

water. This change does not affect you if you are a leaseholder or if you don't pay your water charges to the Council. You will get letters nearer the time about how this affects you and how to pay.

Your contribution to our fire risk assessments

All landlords including Camden Council are required to carry out fire risk assessments (FRAs) on their properties with shared communal areas. The FRA looks at how safe a property is, what the fire risks are and gives recommendations on how to improve fire safety.

You said: Following the Grenfell tragedy, we received enquiries from many Camden residents and councillors about FRAs, what they cover and when they happen.

We did: As part of Camden's commitment to being open and transparent with resident safety, we invited residents and TRA chairs to take part in FRAs on their blocks.

Sarah Friday, co-chair of her TRA and member of the Fire Safety Advisory Panel was present for the fire risk assessment for her block. "I was told that Camden were reviewing the FRAs for my building and I was keen to be involved. It was useful to take part in the FRA for my building because I could give residents first hand feedback. I was able to ask questions directly and learn about the process through conversations with the assessors. In turn, because I knew the building, I showed them particular areas that also needed to be assessed."

Sarah Friday took part in her block's fire risk assessment

The Council will approach your TRA when an FRA is due at your building. If you live in a street property, the Council will write to you directly. When available, the FRAs will be published on the Camden website at camden.gov.uk/fra

Investment near you

Scaffolding is going up at the Bourne Estate as part of phase one of the £6 million investment in the Grade II listed buildings.

Scaffolding up at Laney Building

One hundred and sixty three homes at Radcliffe, Laney, Buckridge and Kirkeby buildings will be the first on the estate to benefit from new timber double-glazed windows. The current windows are single-glazed and not energy efficient and the new windows will improve energy efficiency and offer greater sound insulation.

We will also be repairing the brickwork, metal railings and roofs as well as redecorating the communal areas. There are three phases to the scheme which will benefit 500 households.

A reminder about the town hall

The town hall is now closed for refurbishment. All services have been relocated. Find out where to access the services you need at camden.gov.uk/townhall

Mount Pleasant – Opening doors for homeless residents

Since re-opening its doors in 2015, the renovated Mount Pleasant building has offered safe accommodation and training for 50 single homeless people with support needs. This has been delivered by the onsite team of support workers from the council's Single Pathway Service. It is crucial in helping residents back into work and independent living as well as providing much needed companionship over the seasonal period.

This year, Mount Pleasant was included in Open House London, the world's largest architecture festival, for the second year running.

Originally built over a century ago, the building started life as a workhouse. Following closure in the 1920s, the site was converted into hostel accommodation. As part of the council's Community Investment Programme, almost a century later it was transformed into the bright and modern facilities that are open today.

Open House visitors were able to learn about the history of the site and the important work of the Single Pathway Service, see a working example of what the Community Investment Programme has achieved, and enjoy the quiet tree lined courtyards. Find out more at cip.camden.gov.uk

Can you help a rough sleeper this winter?

Do you know how to help if you see someone sleeping rough? The Camden Safer Streets Team is working hard to get people off the

Help us help you this winter

At this time of year, having a cold or feeling unwell can ruin your festive plans – but there are simple things you can do to prevent seasonal illness.

For minor health concerns, including a cough or cold, speak to your pharmacist first and nip it in the bud before it gets more serious. They will assess you and decide the best course of action for self-care.

For more urgent medical concerns that are not life threatening, you can call NHS 111. The phone line is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week and calls are free from landlines and mobile phones.

Keep an eye on your vulnerable and older neighbours by visiting them regularly. If you have concerns about a vulnerable neighbour, contact your housing officer.

Camden Alive

Earlier this year, we were delighted to be awarded the Mayor of London's Cultural Impact Award as part of the London Borough of Culture competition. The award was given for our project 'Camden Alive', which will invite residents on estates across the borough to share their personal experiences of Camden. These stories will be brought to life through cutting-edge virtual reality technology for everyone to explore. As part of the first stages of the project, we're working with residents at the Maiden Lane Estate. We'll be working with more residents in the new year. Find out more at lovecamden.org

Have your say in our caretaking review

Our estates are looked after by council staff and contractors. Our caretakers look after the communal areas inside your buildings, estate sweepers provided by our contractor Veolia clean the outside areas on your estates, and gardening maintenance is provided by contractor Idverde.

We want to find out how we can improve your caretaking service and make sure that you are happy with how we look after where you live. To help us get it right take part in our review. Tell us what you think about how we deliver our services now, and how we can do better in future at camden.gov.uk/caretakingreview by Sunday 13 January.

Camden's financial challenge

This month, our spending plans for local public services will be discussed by the Council's Cabinet.

We're proud to provide essential services to our communities but Camden Council, along with public services across the country, is facing a financial challenge. Since 2010 the government has cut our budget in half and we've had to make savings of £169 million.

Due to continued cuts, rising costs and increased demand for services, by 2022 we'll need to save a further estimated £35-40 million from our annual budget. We need to prepare now for how we'll make these savings, which means making some difficult decisions.

At a Cabinet meeting on 12 December, cabinet members with responsibility for all of the affected areas will discuss the report. The report will state which decisions are to be taken that night, the plans that will continue to be developed, and the plans that will require local engagement or consultation before a decision is taken.

Affordable homes for adult children of Camden council tenants

Our first 65 Camden Living homes have been let and residents have settled in.

Nearly a third of the new tenants are adult children of Camden's council or housing association tenants.

It's our aim to provide homes at lower rents for children of council tenants because these residents typically find it harder to move out of their parents' council homes due to the high private rents in Camden.

Camden Living is a company the council set up to allow us to rent homes at lower rents. They're designed to fill the gap for those who can't afford private rented homes but aren't eligible for council housing. This also includes nurses, doctors, medical researchers, teachers, police officers and probation officers.

Our first Camden Living homes are let, but more will become available. You can register your interest for Camden Living and other affordable housing schemes with our partners on our website camdenliving.co.uk
