25. Authorise Share Repurchase

The authority is limited to 10% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, it is recommended that Camden oppose.

ASTRAZENECA PLC AGM - 11-04-2024

5m. Re-elect Marcus Wallenberg - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director. Not independent as he is a Non-Executive Director and the former CEO of Investor AB, which has a 3.33% interest in the issued share capital of the Company. He has also served on the Board for over nine years. There is sufficient independent representation on the Board. There are time commitment concerns and the Director has not attended all available board/committee meetings during the year under review. Furthermore, at the previous AGM Mr. Marcus Wallenberg received opposition of 19.07% and the Company has not disclosed the steps to address any concerns with the Company's shareholders. Based on the mentioned concerns, it is recommended that Camden oppose.

Vote Cast: Oppose

Results: For: 77.9, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 22.0,

7. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 750% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Rating: ADC.

8. Amend AstraZeneca Performance Share Plan 2020

The Board proposes the approval changes to the AstraZeneca Performance Share Plan 2020. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 22.39% of audit fees during the year under review and 18.65% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.

3. Shareholder Resolution: Transparency in Political Spending

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden requests 'that IQVIA provide a report, updated semiannually, disclosing the Company's: Policies and procedures for making, with corporate funds or assets, contributions and expenditures (direct or indirect) to (a) participate or intervene in any campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office, or (b) influence the general public, or any segment thereof, with respect to an election or referendum. Monetary and non-monetary contributions and expenditures (direct and indirect) used in the manner described in section 1 above, including: The identity of the recipient as well as the amount paid to each; and The title(s) of the person(s) in the Company responsible for decision-making. A company's reputation, value, and bottom line can be adversely impacted by political spending. The risk is especially serious when giving to trade associations, Super PACs, 527 committees, and 'social welfare' organizations – group that routinely pass money to or spend on behalf of candidates and political causes that a company might not otherwise wish to support. The Conference Board's 2021 'Under a Microscope' report details these risks, recommends the process suggested in this proposal, and warns 'a new era of stakeholder scrutiny, social media, and political polarization has propelled corporate political activity – and the risks that come with it – into the spotlight. Political activity can pose increasingly significant risks for companies, including the perception that political contributions – and other forms of activity – are at odds with core company values.' This proposal asks IQVIA to disclose all of its electoral spending, including payments to trade associations and other tax-exempt organizations which may be used for electoral purposes – and are otherwise undisclosed.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'IQVIA has historically engaged in very limited corporate political contributions, even less engagement with individual campaigns and has not used any corporate funds for political contributions to federal candidates or national political parties. We also do not have a political action committee. Proposal No. 3 focuses primarily on obtaining enhanced disclosures on policies and procedures for contributing to candidates for public office, influencing elections and identifying such contributions and expenditures and does not seek additional disclosures on lobbying activities. While IQVIA has already publicly disclosed certain of its policies and procedures around political contributions in its Code of Conduct, including that no IQVIA employee nor anyone acting on the Company's behalf may make any direct or indirect political contribution or expenditure on behalf of IQVIA unless authorized in writing by the Legal Department, we have recently decided to publish our Political Activity Policy and our Political Spend Report on our website at ir.iqvvia.com and intend to update the report on an annual basis. This Policy and Report complement our Code of Conduct and Political Campaign and Government Affairs Activities Policy, which govern how IQVIA employees may participate in civic and political activities on their own time in a way that makes clear that such personal activities are not done on behalf of IQVIA. IQVIA's Political Activity Policy generally prohibits the use of corporate funds for political contributions to U.S. state and local candidates and committees or ballot measure committees, unless approved in advance by the Company's General Counsel. The Nominating and Governance Committee of the IQVIA Board of Directors (the N&G Committee) is responsible for overseeing the Company's public affairs and public policy initiatives and periodically reviewing the Company's policies, activities and expenditures with respect to political contributions.'

PIRC analysis: The transparency and completeness of the company's reporting on political spending could be improved. The board's argument makes clear that its compliance with political spending disclosure regulations complies only with the minimum requirements: this is considered incomplete and insufficient. Moreover, it is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders to be open about political spending and so avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

HUNTING PLC AGM - 17-04-2024

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. However, the deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is not considered adequate. Half of the bonus should be deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The balance of CEO realised pay with financial performance is considered acceptable as the change in CEO total pay over five years is commensurate with the change in TSR over the same period. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. As there is no Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme.

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nomination Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Also, not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is a member of the nomination committee. It is important that this committee be exclusively comprised of independent directors in order to ensure an equitable and unprejudiced appointment process. Does not meet Camden guidelines.

It is proposed to amend the 2019 Stock Incentive Plan which is to increase the number of shares of Class A common stock available for issuance by 7.0 million shares. There are concerns with the Plan as the it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. 5. Shareholder Resolution: Lobbying Activities

Proponent's argument: The Service Employees International Union Pension Plans Master Trust 'request the preparation of a report, updated annually, disclosing: Company policy and procedures governing lobbying, both direct and indirect, and grassroots lobbying communications, Payments by Charter used for (a) direct or indirect lobbying or (b) grassroots lobbying communications, in each case including the amount of the payment and the recipient, Charter's membership in and payments to any tax-exempt organization that writes and endorses model legislation, Description of management's decision-making process and the Board's oversight for making payments described in sections 2 and 3 above... Charter spent $80,765,000 from 2010 – 2021 on federal lobbying. This does not include state lobbying expenditures, where Charter lobbied in at least 31 states in 2021 and spent $2.9 million on lobbying in California from 2015 – 2021. Charter fails to disclose its payments to trade associations and social welfare groups, or the amounts used for lobbying, to stockholders. Companies can give unlimited amounts to third party groups that spend millions on lobbying and undisclosed grassroots activity... We believe Charter's lack of disclosure presents reputational risks when its lobbying contradicts company public positions. For example, Charter states that it is committed to an open internet, yet NCTA and Broadband for America lobbied against net neutrality. While Charter is committed to diversity and inclusion, groups have asked Charter to leave ALEC because of its voter restriction efforts... we believe in full disclosure of Charter's lobbying activities and expenditures to assess whether Charter's lobbying is consistent with its expressed goals and stockholder interests.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'Our Board believes that our Company's participation in the political, legislative and regulatory processes at all levels of government enhances stockholder value. Our Company is committed to participating constructively in the political process to increase shareholder value and in full compliance with applicable rules and regulations. Our Company makes significant disclosures regarding lobbying and political contributions, and our Board believes that these current disclosures are appropriate and consistent with the objectives of transparency and accountability reflected in the proposal. Indeed, the proponent includes contribution data from our disclosures, demonstrating that significant information concerning our activities is already publicly available. Additional detailed disclosures regarding our participation or contribution to any tax-exempt industry organization or trade associations may further encourage issue activists, some motivated by special or short-term interests, to pressure us to alter our political participation in a manner that could adversely affect stockholder interests, or require us to disclose proprietary information, putting us at a competitive disadvantage. Our Company maintains membership in trade associations and other tax-exempt entities primarily for strategic, rather than advocacy-related purposes. For these reasons, additional disclosures regarding contributions to such organizations and associations would not provide useful information to stockholders. Our Board also opposes the proposal because many aspects of it are vague or unworkable and may create confusion. The definition of lobbying, and the expenditures that would be considered lobbying-related, vary across jurisdictions and could include employee salaries, office rent and employee travel expenses. As a result, the disclosures regarding lobbying-related expenditures required by the proposal may be inconsistent and confusing, as a particular expenditure may be considered lobbying-related in one jurisdiction but not in another.

PIRC analysis: Political spending is considered to be a different issue than lobbying expenditures. Links to public disclosures of lobbying at the state and federal level are not the same as full disclosure published on the company's website. Moreover, it is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders to be open about lobbying activities and so avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence. The request for a report is considered reasonable and a vote for the resolution is recommended. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Political Expenditures Report

Proponent's argument: New York State Common Retirement Fund "request that the Company provide a report, updated semiannually, disclosing the Company's: Policies and procedures for making, with corporate funds or assets, contributions and expenditures (direct or indirect) to (a) participate or intervene in any campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for public office, or (b) influence the general public, or any segment thereof, with respect to an election or referendum. Monetary and non-monetary contributions and expenditures (direct and indirect) used in the manner described in section 1 above, including: The identity of the recipient as well as the amount paid to each; and The title(s) of the person(s) in the Company responsible for decision-making. The report shall be presented to the board of directors or relevant board committee and posted on the Company's website within 12 months from the date of the annual meeting. This proposal does not encompass lobbying spending... A company's reputation, value, and bottom line can be adversely impacted by political spending. The risk is especially serious when giving to trade associations, Super PACs, 527 committees, and "social welfare" organizations – groups that routinely pass money to or spend on behalf of candidates and political causes that a company might not otherwise wish to support... Publicly available records show Charter has contributed at least $3.9 million in corporate funds since the 2010 election cycle. This proposal asks Charter to disclose all of its electoral spending, including payments to trade associations and other tax-exempt organizations which may be used for electoral purposes – and are otherwise not public. This would bring our Company in line with a growing number of leading companies."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our Board believes that our Company's participation in the political, legislative and regulatory processes at all levels of government enhances stockholder value. Our Company is committed to participating constructively in the political process to increase shareholder value and in full compliance with applicable rules and regulations. Our Company's political contributions and expenditures are made to further the best interests of the Company and our stockholders and are made without regard to the personal political preferences of individual board members, officers, or employees. We are subject to extensive regulation at the federal and state levels and are involved in a number of legislative initiatives across a broad spectrum of policy areas that can have an immediate and dramatic effect on our business and operations. We ethically and constructively promote legislative and regulatory actions that further the business objectives of our Company and attempt to protect our Company from unreasonable, unnecessary, or burdensome legislative or regulatory actions at all levels of government... the information currently made available strikes the appropriate balance between transparency and excessive burden and cost, and that additional disclosures with respect to lobbying and political expenditures would not provide useful information to stockholders. The implementation of the proposal's additional requirements would result in the unproductive consumption of valuable time and corporate resources without materially enhancing existing disclosures... Additional detailed disclosures regarding our participation or contribution to any tax-exempt industry organization or trade associations may further encourage issue activists, some motivated by special or short-term interests, to pressure us to alter our political participation in a manner that could adversely affect stockholder interests, or require us to disclose proprietary information, putting us at a competitive disadvantage."

PIRC analysis: The transparency and completeness of the company's reporting on political spending is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders. As reputational risk is increasingly under scrutiny from shareholders and stakeholders and the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues is becoming more evident, companies are expected to show that they live up to their policy, strategy and commitments, as well as to be open about political spending, in order to avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it commits to. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

SERCO GROUP PLC AGM - 24-04-2024

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. However, the deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is not considered adequate. Half of the bonus should be deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. 5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Politicized De-Banking Proponent's argument: Leonard E. Crumpler, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "Financial institutions are essential pillars of the marketplace. Because of their unique and pivotal role in America's economy, many federal and state laws already prohibit them from discriminating against customers. The UN Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that "everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion."1 These are an important part of protecting every American's right to free speech and free exercise of religion. As shareholders of Bank of America, we believe it is essential for the company to provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views. We are concerned with recent evidence of religious and political discrimination against customers by companies in the financial services industry, as seen in recent examples and the 2022 Statement on Debanking and Free Speech."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have a long-standing commitment to support economic opportunity for all people and communities. That commitment is critical to how we drive Responsible Growth by delivering for our teammates, clients, and shareholders and it is reflected in our policies and practices. Internally, this is core to being a great place to work, and our workforce reflects the communities in which we live and serve. Externally, this is core to our client-driven approach, delivering products and services that meet the diverse needs of our clients, and investing our resources to support our communities and the issues affecting them. We firmly believe that as a financial institution it is our responsibility and part of our daily course of business to help make financial lives better. Our engagement with our employees, clients, vendors, and communities around the world is guided by our commitment to fair, ethical, and responsible business practices, which is embodied in our values and reflected in our Human Rights Statement and our Code of Conduct. Our Human Rights Statement describes the policies and standards we have implemented to respect human rights. Our Code of Conduct makes clear that the company does not tolerate unlawful discrimination or harassment of any kind and that these expectations apply whenever employees are engaged in business on behalf of the company. Promoting nondiscrimination and equality, diversity, and inclusion, both inside our company with employees and outside our company in our communities, are critical components of Responsible Growth and our drive to grow in a sustainable manner. Our ongoing efforts in these areas, our continuous engagement with shareholders, employees, and external stakeholders representing a diverse range of perspectives and thought, and our Board's oversight and leadership of our efforts, demonstrate our commitment to understanding and improving our company's impacts on all stakeholders. Through Responsible Growth, we are making meaningful progress for our customers, communities, and teammates, through ongoing engagement and collaboration with third-party experts on civil rights, nondiscrimination, equality, diversity, and inclusion. These ongoing engagements help drive progress and hold us accountable for our actions."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company's policy on discrimination related risks allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company; including stakeholder relationship. However; this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints; including books that some customers may find objectionable; does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. This resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. The requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Climate Lobbying

Proponent's argument: Sada Geuss, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors analyze and report to shareholders annually (at reasonable cost, omitting confidential and proprietary information) on whether and how it is aligning its lobbying and policy influence activities and positions, both direct and indirect (through trade associations, coalitions, alliances, and other organizations) with its public commitment to achieve net zero emissions by 2050, including the climate policy activities and positions analyzed, the criteria used to assess alignment, and the involvement of stakeholders, if any, in the analytical process. "In evaluating the degree of alignment between its net zero goals and its policy advocacy, which we believe good governance calls for, BAC should disclose its lobbying actions regarding climate provisions of key international, federal, and state legislation and regulation, and not rely on organizational statements supporting climate progress. BAC should consider investor expectations in Global Standard on Responsible Climate Lobbying a useful implementation resource."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "As is provided in our multiple public disclosures about our transition strategy, we are helping finance the transition to net zero emissions by 2050 by setting and achieving milestone targets, partnering with clients to support their transition, investing in climate solutions, developing decision-useful metrics to drive progress, leading industry collaborations, and following guidance to promote transparency. We continue to make progress toward our net zero goal, and our public policy engagement activities in support of our net zero goal are described in our Approach to Zero transition strategy and our 2023 Task Force for Climate-Related Financial Disclosures Report. Our public policy team is engaged with policymakers across the globe, often through participation in trade associations as we already disclose, to help us understand and, where appropriate, work to influence potential policy changes that could impact our company, clients, or communities we serve, and accelerate the transition-related work underway in the private sector. Independently, and working with trade associations and through other collaborations, we promote policies that can help the balanced and just transition to net zero. We engage with trade associations to address many other issues that may impact our company, our clients, or the markets/economies in which we operate. We often voice our differing view on significant issues to such organizations and continually evaluate the overall benefit of our continued memberships to assess whether they remain aligned with our commitment to Responsible Growth and continue to serve the overall best interests of our company and our shareholders. As a global financial services company, the company is committed to participation in the political process in a manner that is consistent with leading corporate governance practices and in compliance with legal requirements. Our approach to political involvement is guided by our Corporate Political Contributions Policy Statement, which sets forth basic principles regarding our company's stance on political contributions and activities, along with our other policies and procedures."

PIRC analysis: The transparency and completeness of the Company's reporting on lobbying expenditures related to climate is considered insufficient. The proposal is advisory and is considered adequately worded to respect the prerogatives of the board. It is considered that the proposal does not mean to undermine the past work of the company in this respect, or the positive role of these associations in some aspects. Steps forward are encouraging, and the company has demonstrated ability to monitor and act, when the work of some associations have come into conflict with the company's support of the Paris Agreement. Although company's contributions to trade associations do not necessarily equate with that association's political or lobbying activities, it is considered to be to the benefit of the Company and its shareholders to be open about those activities, especially if they are antithetical to its published statements about climate risk and how it is attempting to manage this. In this sense, a vote in favour is recommended as a way to show shareholders' support for the board efforts to oversee and manage its relationships with industry associations, whose positioning may not align with either the position adopted by the company or the interests of long-term investors.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Clean Energy Supply Financing Ratio

Proponent's argument: The New York City Employees' Retirement System, a Shareholder of the Company, request that Bank of America ("Company") disclose annually its Clean Energy Supply Financing Ratio ("Ratio"), defined as its total financing through equity and debt underwriting, and project finance, in low-carbon energy supply as a proportion of that in fossil-fuel energy supply. The disclosure, prepared at reasonable expense and excluding confidential information, shall describe the Company's methodology, including what it classifies as "low carbon" or "fossil fuel." "Banks aligning their activities with their own climate goals are better prepared to manage the risks, including legal, reputational and financial risks, associated with the global energy transition. Furthermore, they can capitalize on profitable opportunities in clean energy and position themselves as leaders in a rapidly changing market. Since 2022, banks have reportedly earned more in lending and underwriting fees from clean energy projects than from oil, gas, and coal companies. The Company has committed to achieve net zero emissions for its financing activities before 2050 and announced a $1 trillion by 2030 goal to "mobilize capital to accelerate the environmental transition."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "As part of our commitment to net zero GHG emissions by 2050, we are transparent about our well-considered and pragmatic strategy for supporting the transition of our energy and power systems clients toward a low-carbon future, and we publicly discuss our strategy and progress in many public disclosures. A key component of our strategy is to mobilize and deploy $1.5 trillion of sustainable financing by 2030. Our goal is aligned with the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals, with $1 trillion being dedicated toward the environmental transition to address climate change and promote the circular economy, including solutions for renewable energy, energy efficiency, clean transportation, water and sanitation, recycling, sustainable agriculture, and carbon capture and sequestration, and $500 billion dedicated toward inclusive social development by advancing community development, affordable housing, health care, education, financial and digital inclusion, and access to basic services. Since our announcement of this goal in 2021, we have mobilized and deployed $560 billion in sustainable finance with more than $316 billion focused on the transition to a sustainable, low-carbon economy. Given stakeholders' interest in bank financing, third parties such as Bloomberg have developed methodologies to calculate energy supply finance ratios and similar information for global banks and disclose these publicly. The report referenced in the proposal, BloombergNEF's Financing the Transition: Energy Supply Investment and Bank Financing Activity already discloses an estimated energy supply finance ratio for our company-the very ratio that the proposal asks us to disclose. Integral to our Approach to Zero strategy, which outlines our commitment to helping finance the transition to net zero GHG emissions and details our target setting methodology, are the emission reduction targets for financing activities. In 2022, we announced targets for financed emissions in the auto manufacturing, energy, and power generation sectors. Achieving net zero GHG emissions associated with our financing activity involves key steps outlined in our Approach to Zero transition strategy, which include assisting our clients and providing them with the advice and financial solutions necessary for them to make progress on their own low-carbon business models. To facilitate engagement with clients across the enterprise, our client relationship teams are well versed in how best to support clients on their own net zero transitions. We are developing innovative products that promote this transition, such as credit facilities that are structured to link pricing to a client's carbon reduction efforts, and financial solutions for new and emerging clean energy technologies that will be critical to provide additional carbon reduction beyond traditional renewable energy sources."

PIRC analysis: The proponent is seeking an acceptable level of additional disclosure on the Company's exposure to chemical risks, social, reputational and financial. Comprehensive reporting on sustainability issues is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing them of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company, as well as strategies put in place to manage those risks and opportunities. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Written Consent

Proponent's argument: Kenneth Steiner, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors permit written consent by the shareholders entitled to cast the minimum number of votes that would be necessary to authorize an action at a meeting at which all shareholders entitled to vote thereon were present and voting. This includes shareholder ability to initiate any appropriate topic for written consent. "Taking action by written consent in place of a meeting is a means shareholders can use to raise important matters outside the normal annual meeting cycle like the election of a new director. For instance, Bank of America executive pay was rejected by 30% of shares in 2023. The 30% rejection was all the more important because it takes much more BAC shareholder conviction to reject executive pay, and thereby disregard the Board of Director's position, than to simply go along with the Board's position. Given the 30% rejection of BAC executive pay in 2023 it seems that BAC could have a more qualified chair of the executive pay committee than Ms. Monica Lozano. The most recent career highlight of Ms. Lozano is 5-years at a non-profit that does not even have a Wikipedia listing. Ms. Lozano also has excessive tenure of 18-years on the Bank of America Board. As director tenure goes up director independence goes down. With Ms. Lozano chairing the executive pay committee at BAC the lack of director independence is unsettling."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Action by written consent can disenfranchise shareholders who are not given the opportunity to vote. Unlike matters presented for a vote at a shareholders' meeting, shareholder action by written consent may not require communication to all shareholders, and may deny shareholders the ability to participate in major decisions affecting the company and their interests. A shareholder seeking action by written consent may attempt to solicit the fewest possible shareholders to take action, rather than seeking input from all shareholders, and may rely on consents obtained from some shareholders before other shareholders have had the ability to evaluate a proposal, express their views, and vote. One or more shareholders owning 10% or more of our outstanding voting stock are entitled to call a special meeting of shareholders outside of our annual meeting cycle.¹ Shareholders' ability to use the special meeting process is not subject to any conditions beyond those that also apply to a Board-called special meeting. The ability for shareholders owning 10% of our common shares to call a special meeting and the proxy access Bylaw provision each allow all, not just some, of our shareholders to express their views and do so more readily than through action by written consent, which would require any proposed actions to be approved by holders of at least a majority (or higher when required by Delaware law) of our outstanding shares (versus votes cast)."

PIRC analysis: The company has strong special meeting rights, such as the ability of shareholders to call one with 10% of shareholders. Nevertheless, there are emergency situations where convening a special meeting might take too long or be too difficult, and written consents may be gathered more quickly. Regardless of the percentage required to call special meetings, written consent rights are very important.

It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Introduce an Independent Chair Rule

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden, a shareholder of the Company, proposes that the Board of Directors adopt an enduring policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary in order that 2 separate people hold the office of the Chairman and the office of the CEO. "This proposal topic won 52% support at Boeing and 54% support at Baxter International. Boeing then adopted this proposal topic in June 2020. The roles of Chairman and CEO are fundamentally different and should be held by 2 directors, a CEO and a Chairman who is completely independent of the CEO and our company. A lead director is thus no substitute for an independent board chairman. With the current CEO serving as Chair this means giving up a substantial check and balance safeguard that can only occur with an independent Board Chairman. A lead director cannot call a special shareholder meeting. A lead director can delegate many details of his lead director duties to management and then simply rubber-stamp it. Management has not explained how shareholders can be sure of what goes on in regard to lead director delegation. The increased complexities of companies of more than $240 Billion in market capitalization, like BAC, increasingly demand that 2 persons fill the 2 most important jobs in the company-CEO and Chairman."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "At a special meeting in September 2015 convened solely for shareholders to voice their opinion on this topic, over 62% of votes cast by our shareholders voted to ratify bylaws that grant our Board the flexibility to determine its leadership structure, including appointing an independent Chair or appointing a Lead Independent Director when the Chair is not an independent director. At our 2017, 2018, and 2023 annual meetings, our shareholders voted on proposals nearly identical to this proposal with over 67%, 69%, and 73%, respectively, of the votes cast voting against the proposals and in favor of the Board retaining flexibility to determine the most effective leadership structure based on applicable circumstances and needs. This flexibility allows the Board to respond to its changing circumstances and needs when determining the most suitable Board leadership structure for the company and to continue to protect and enhance long-term shareholder value. The Board does not believe one singular, fixed Board leadership model is universally or permanently appropriate in all circumstances. In deciding whether an independent Chair or a Lead Independent Director is right for the company at any particular time, the Board's determination should not be unthinking and mechanical. The Board is committed to objective, independent Board leadership and views the provision of active, objective, and independent oversight as central to effective Board governance, to serving the best interests of our company and our shareholders, and to executing our strategic objectives and creating long-term value. The Board believes that independent board oversight involves not only having a properly defined independent board leader, such as a strong Lead Independent Director when the Chair is the CEO, but also having robust governance structures that promote active oversight. The Board evaluates and reviews the Board's leadership structure at least annually to determine what, if any, changes are appropriate based on the Board's and company's then-existing circumstances and needs, and in light of input from shareholders and other stakeholders. Providing the Board with flexibility to make these leadership decisions empowers the Board to do what is in the best interests of the company and our shareholders."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

10. Shareholder Resolution: Remuneration Issue

Proponent's argument: Jing Zhao, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors improve the executive compensation program to include the CEO pay ratio factor. "The Company's executive compensation jumped irregularly, irrationally, and unreasonably from 2021 to 2022: from 23,729,169 to 30,177,503 (+27.2%) for CEO, from 10,956,873 to 12,601,937 (+15.0%) for CFO, from 12,262,492 to 20,650,361 (+68.4%) for Regional Banking President, from 12,669,214 to 20,660,643 (+63.1%) for Vice Chair, from 12,474,933 to 20,652,107 (+65.5%) for Chief Risk Officer. The CEO pay ratio in 2022 was 258:1. Furthermore, how different executive officers could achieve the same incomes for the vastly different functions of the Regional Banking President, the Vice Chair and the Chief Risk Officer? The 1-year total shareholder return was -23.8%. As a policy recommendation, the Company may refer to Aristotle's Politiká/Politics, in which he concluded that in a stable polis community, the disparity of wealth (land ownership) should not be more than 5 times. Human nature has not changed so dramatically. The Company has the flexibility to reform the Compensation and Human Capital Committee to improve the executive compensation program, such as to include the CEO pay ratio factor."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Responsible Growth that is sustainable includes being a great place to work. We drive Responsible Growth and our commitment to being a great place to work strategically and holistically. We pay our teammates fairly based on market rates for their roles, experience, and how they perform, and we regularly benchmark against other companies both within and outside our industry to help maintain competitive pay. We recognize performance and share success at all levels of our company. Since 2017, we have awarded more than $4.8 billion in special compensation awards to teammates in recognition of their contributions to our drive for Responsible Growth, with approximately 97% of employees receiving an award in 2024. We also provide employees with access to industry-leading benefits that promote physical, emotional, and financial wellness, and continue to evolve these benefits and programs to meet employees where they are in their career and personal lives. Our compensation philosophy is to pay for performance over the long-term, as well as on an annual basis. As explained in our Compensation discussion and analysis beginning on page 53, our executive officers are awarded equity compensation after the performance year to which those awards relate. However, SEC rules require those awards to be reported as compensation for the year in which the awards are granted, which we believe can at times obscure the alignment between our executive compensation practices and corporate performance. Our Compensation Discussion and Analysis details how our executive compensation program appropriately links compensation to our performance and properly aligns the interests of our executive officers with those of our shareholders. As part of our evaluation of our executive compensation program, our Compensation and Human Capital Committee and senior leaders regularly solicit feedback from our shareholders on our executive compensation program, human capital management, and other compensation-related matters. These discussions with shareholders provide the Committee with valuable insight and feedback that inform their pay evaluation and decision process. In 2023 and early 2024, we held over 70 engagement meetings with shareholders representing over 3.9 billion shares of our outstanding common stock, with our Board's Lead Independent Director and the Compensation and Human Capital Committee Chair participating in over 40 of those meetings. During these meetings, shareholders provided valuable input on a range of executive compensation and human capital related matters; however, no shareholders raised concerns related to the CEO pay ratio or requested the adoption of a policy similar to the proposal's request."

PIRC analysis: The disclosure of the pay ratio between the pay of the CEO or the NEOs and that of the median employee, is mandatory in the US under SEC rules (and applies to US-listed companies such as this) and in several other major Western economies and is considered not only to be best practice but also to provide useful information to shareholders to help guide their approval or disapproval of the executive compensation programmes at a company. Several companies have disclosed the figure voluntarily without any damage to their ability to recruit and incentivise senior level employees. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

5. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. 22. Approval of Buyback Waiver

The company are proposing a Rule 9 waiver, which will exempt Said Darwazah, Mazen Darwazah and Ali Al-Husry (all Executive Directors and persons acting in concert with them) from the requirement of the City Code that they make an offer for the entire share capital of the company. If the Company were to repurchase from persons other than the concert party all the ordinary shares for which it is seeking authority, their interest would increase from 28.76% to 31.95% of the issued share capital to an undisclosed amount. The share buy back linked to this proposal will mean that the significant shareholder may become a controlling shareholder (30%+) and therefore this requested waiver is not supported, given its impact on the governance of the company by minority shareholders.

4. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year

under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The Board proposes the re-adoption of the long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

8. Re-elect Rupert Soames - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

19. Approve New Executive Share Option Scheme/Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a Restricted Share Plan (RSP) for US Executive Directors. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration Policy. However, it is clear from Company reporting that sufficient steps have been taken in order to address the concerns raised. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

14. Amend Existing Long Term Incentive Plan

The STV Group Plc Long Term Incentive Plan (the 'LTIP') provides a flexible vehicle to facilitate the recruitment, retention and incentivisation of the Company's Executive Directors and senior leaders within the shareholder-approved Directors' Remuneration Policy. Certain changes are being proposed to the LTIP to align it with evolving practice: i) Imposition of a limit of 5% of share capital over 10 years on the number of shares that can be made available for the Company's executive share plans (in addition to the 10% over 10 years limit that applies to all its plans) ii) Allowing the extent to which awards normally vest to be reduced in exceptional circumstances, iii) Widening the circumstances in which benefits under the LTIP may be subject to forfeiture, additional conditions or repayment for up to 5 years after their grant, iv) Provision for awards held by individuals who cease employment to have their vesting conditional upon not taking up alternative employment and v) Provision for the grant of awards in connection with recruitment (typically to compensate for awards from previous employment that will be forfeited) that will not be subject to the normal plan limits.

PIRC does not consider that LTIPs are an effective means of incentivising performance. These schemes are not considered to be properly long term and are subject to manipulation due to their discretionary nature. Opposition is recommended.

12. Shareholder Resolution: Impact of share buybacks on earnings per share performance condition of awards granted to participants of the 2021 Long Term Incentive Plan of the Company

Mr. Michael Chadwick, in his capacity as a shareholder of the Company holding in excess of 3% of the Company's shares, proposes that the Company the calculation of the earnings per share performance condition of awards granted, or to be granted, under the LTIP and provides that the Board and the Remuneration Committee of the Company be directed to ensure that the vesting outcome for each financial year of the Company for performance conditions in respect of (i) any awards issued under the LTIP based on earnings per share ("EPS Condition") following the date of Resolution 12 shall be calculated based on the number of shares in issue in the capital of the Company (other than treasury shares) at the end of that financial year; and (ii) any awards issued under the LTIP based on the EPS Condition prior to the date of Resolution 12 shall be amended and re-calculated based on the number of shares in issue in the capital of the Company (other than treasury shares) at the end of that financial year and any awards shall be revised to reflect such recalculated vesting outcomes Proponent's argument: The Proposing Shareholder has provided the following explanation: "The purpose of the proposed agenda item and resolution is to address the unfair impact of share buybacks on the satisfaction of earnings per share performance conditions ("EPS Conditions") under the Company's LTIP. By requiring the satisfaction of EPS Conditions to be based on the number of shares in issue at a fixed date prior to the issue of the relevant award, LTIP participants are likely to have an artificially reduced vesting outcome in each year in which share buybacks are made, resulting in reduced vesting outcomes and limiting the incentives for senior management to drive future growth for the Company".

Company's response: the Board proposes to vote against this resolution. Awards granted to participants under the LTIP up to, and including, the 2023 award were based on an adjusted earnings per share performance condition (the "Adjusted EPS Performance Condition") (except in the case of awards granted to the CEO, CFO and Group Financial Controller/Company Secretary during this period, which were based on a Total Shareholder Return performance condition (50%) and an Adjusted EPS Performance Condition (50%)). Under the share buyback programmes completed during 2022 and 2023, the Company bought back a material number of shares amounting to approximately 14.5% of its issued share capital. The Remuneration Committee decided to exclude the impact of the Company's share buyback programmes in calculating the Adjusted EPS Performance Condition. If approved by shareholders at the AGM, Resolution 12 could result in a significant increase in the number of shares issued to participants of the LTIP as a consequence of the more favourable calculation of the Adjusted EPS Performance Condition.....Performance Condition, as currently implemented by the Remuneration Committee for awards granted under the LTIP, is in the best interests of the Company.

PIRC analysis: The disclosure of the impact of share buybacks on the satisfaction of earnings per share performance conditions compensation for executive is considered to be best practice but also to provide useful information to shareholders to help guide their approval or disapproval of the executive compensation programmes at a company. Companies can disclose these figures without any damage to their ability to recruit and incentivise senior level employees.

The maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP have not been adequately disclosed. 17. Shareholder Resolution: Midland Clawback Campaign

Proponent's argument: Shareholders request that the Board of Directors revisits the 'State Deduction' applied to members of the post 1974 section of the Midland Bank Pension Scheme by introducing a 'safety net'. 'We propose the amount deducted should be capped so no pensioner suffers a deduction greater than 5%, thereby helping resolve the disparity and making it fairer for all scheme members. [...] State Deduction is the practice of withholding part of an occupational pension when a person reaches state pension age. – For members of the post 1974 Midland Pension Scheme, the manner in which it is currently applied, is hugely disproportionate and significantly impacts the lowest paid, mainly women, as it is entirely driven by length of service, rather than the amount of pension being paid. – This means that if a top manager and a junior staff member work an equal number of years, an identical deduction is made to their company pension. This is an inequality and is hugely disparate and unfair. Past employment practices now demonstrate that many more women are adversely affected than men, plunging many into financial distress. – The impact of the current practice can be illustrated by a recent copy letter posted on the campaigns Facebook group, (the ladies details have been removed to preserve her privacy).'

Company's response: The board recommends a vote against this proposal. 'We believe the issue of State Deduction has already been subject to extensive consideration involving: legal advice from leading counsel; consideration and rejection of the Campaign Group's claim of inequality by the EHRC; independent legal advice from the Scheme Trustee's counsel; a market review and consideration of this issue at four previous AGMs where, in each case, the shareholders have strongly rejected the resolutions proposed by the Campaign Group. Introducing a cap on the State Deduction amount would benefit certain members more than others and would constitute a retrospective change that would only benefit a particular group of members, whilst other groups of members not affected by the State Deduction or with a deduction below the proposed cap would see no benefit at all. [...] HSBC has been continuously engaged over several years in addressing questions on the State Deduction and on occasion this has involved face to face meetings. Such meetings may be appropriate if or when any new aspect of this issue is presented but not when this will involve addressing queries that have already been answered or settled (for example by the EHRC). HSBC has continued to respond to all correspondence and provide answers where appropriate. Consistent with this approach, in November 2021 further detailed written advice was provided to queries presented by the All Party Parliamentary Group (the 'APPG') involved with the Campaign Group. This advice explained the accepted legal position and the associated facts relevant to aspects of the State Deduction. An offer of a subsequent bi-lateral meeting was also extended to the Chair of the APPG should any clarification be required. Since then, HSBC has not become aware or been advised by the Campaign Group, or any other parties, of any new aspect of the State Deduction, including any results arising from the academic research commissioned by the Campaign Group last year, that has not already been considered previously.'

PIRC analysis:The policy that the Company applies is legal according to the practices of the pensions scheme in the UK. The valuation for the entire HSBC Bank (UK) Pension Scheme was in surplus of GBP 3.1 billion on an ongoing basis as at 31 December 2022 (as per page 355 of the annual report), including include defined contribution assets amounting to GBP 2.4 billion. However, the claw-back policy applicable to pensions is considered outdated and as a matter of fact, a number of comparable peers like Barclays, NatWest, Lloyds, Clydesdale, the Post Office and the Bank of England have abandoned it. Unlike previous proposals, this resolution is not asking for the company to take immediate action, only to cooperate with researchers in order to grow the existing literature on the topic. The company's response does not appear to clarify the proponents' issues or bring a case as of why such cooperation would be counter-productive. The resolution is not unduly prescriptive and it is considered beneficial for management and shareholders to look at data from an academic perspective.

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nominating and Governance Committee. Not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nominating and Governance Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

Additionally, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Furthermore, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. 1j. Elect John T. Schwieters - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee and Member of the Nominating and Governance Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Additionally, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

Furthermore, at the company, the Audit Committee does not oversee the whistle-blowing hotline. This may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalated which may mean the issue is concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Right to Call Special Meetings

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden requests that the Board take the steps necessary to amend the appropriate company governing documents to give the owners of a combined 15% of our outstanding common stock the power to call a special shareholder meeting. "Currently it takes a theoretical 25% of all shares outstanding to call for a special shareholder meeting. This theoretical 25% of all shares outstanding translates into 30% of the shares that vote at our annual meeting. It would be hopeless to expect that shares that do not have the time to vote would have the time to go through the special procedural steps to call for a special shareholder meeting. This proposal won 43%-support at the 2022 Danaher annual meeting for a lower 10% of shares to be able to call for a special shareholder meeting. This 43% support likely represented close to or more than 51% support from the shareholders who have access to independent proxy voting advice and are not forced to overly depend on the anti-shareholder rights voting advice of management. In reflecting on the 43%-support it is important to remember that it takes more shareholder conviction to ignore management's recommendation and vote for this proposal topic than to simply vote as management directs."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Currently, shareholders of 25% of our outstanding Common Stock have the right to call a special meeting, pursuant to a Company proposal previously approved by our shareholders. Our Board continues to believe that this threshold ensures a reasonable number of shareholders consider a matter important enough to merit a special meeting. Preparing for and holding a special meeting (even in a virtual format) would be time-consuming and expensive. If adopted, this proposal would have the effect of allowing a relatively small percentage of shareholders with potentially narrow interests to call special meetings to consider matters that may not be in the best interests of all of our shareholders. Even if they are ultimately not able to obtain support from a majority of shares, those who might seek to call a special shareholders' meeting could subject us to considerable expense, distract management and the Board from important business initiatives, or seek self-interested concessions in exchange for avoiding a special meeting. Danaher's Nominating and Governance Committee and Company management annually review Danaher's special meeting threshold, taking into account investor feedback as well as voting results in prior years when similar proposals to reduce the threshold has been brought. Based on this review and these inputs, it was determined that the existing 25% threshold continues to strike an appropriate balance between avoiding waste of Danaher and shareholder resources on addressing narrow or special interests, while at the same time ensuring that shareholders holding a significant minority of our outstanding shares have an appropriate mechanism to call a special meeting if they deem it appropriate."

PIRC analysis: The right to call a special shareholder meeting provides shareholders with a way of communicating with the Board and debating and voting on issues with the rest of shareholders which in itself enhances shareholders' rights. A 10% threshold would be recommended. However, the 25% threshold requested by the Proponent is nevertheless considered a step forward in this sense, since the company currently provides for none. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Publish Annually a Report Assessing Diversity and Inclusion Efforts

Proponent's argument: As You Sow, on behalf of Eliana Fishman request that the Board report to shareholders on the effectiveness of the Company's diversity, equity, and inclusion efforts. The report should be done at reasonable expense, exclude proprietary information, and provide transparency on outcomes, using quantitative metrics for workforce diversity, hiring, promotion, and retention of employees, including data by gender, race, and ethnicity. "Companies that release, or have committed to release, more inclusion data than Danaher include Baxter International, Biogen, CVS Health, Gilead Sciences, Pfizer, and UnitedHealth Group. As You Sow and Whistle Stop Capital released research in November 2023 that reviewed over 4,500 EEO-1 reports, which show corporate workforce diversity. The data shows a positive correlation between manager diversity and corporate performance. Within the healthcare sector, statistically significant positive correlations were found between increased manager diversity and free cash flow per share, income after tax, and ten-year revenue growth rate. The Company states it "sincerely hopes that [its] marginalized and underrepresented associates feel supported and a sense of belonging..." However, as of the date of the filing of this proposal, Danaher had not yet shared sufficient hiring, retention, or promotion data to allow investors to determine the effectiveness of its diversity and inclusion programs. As detailed below, inclusion indicators are important in assessing Danaher's workplace equity efforts and if the Company is successfully building, utilizing, and maintaining a diverse management team.

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Danaher has demonstrated that diversity, equity and inclusion ("DEI") is a strategic priority with active support from the Board and executive management; has set ambitious DEI improvement goals and made meaningful progress toward achieving those goals; and has been highly transparent in quantifying the performance of its DEI program. Given that Danaher's extensive disclosures already give investors the data they need to assess the effectiveness of our DEI program, the proponents' request for additional reporting including additional demographic data that few companies publish would be an unnecessary and inefficient use of resources that would serve only the limited interests of a small group of shareholders. Danaher's annual sustainability report demonstrates a strategic commitment to DEI at the highest levels of our organization. We publicly disclose in our annual sustainability report: Employee demographic data by gender, race and age; New hire data by gender and (for the U.S.) People of Color; U.S. pay equity by gender and race. We are devoting significant time and resources to advancing our DE+I strategy and achieving our strategic DE+I objectives. Diverting those resources to address the proponents' interest in additional reporting and additional demographic data that few companies publish would be inefficient and costly without adding significant value to our shareholders. In addition, As You Sow's own top-5% ranking of Danaher's DE+I disclosure practices suggest that Danaher's disclosures already reflect the best practices espoused by the proponents."

PIRC analysis: The requested report will provide shareholders with information on the Company's efforts in relation to workforce diversity. While the Company's response describes the diversity initiatives it is involved in, no goals for diversity and inclusion and no data on the gender make-up of the workforce is provided on the company's website or sustainability report. A report on the gender make-up of the Company's workforce and more detail on the policies and programmes for fostering diversity of employees would enable investors to assess the Company's exposure to reputational and human resource risk surrounding the issue of gender diversity. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

CENTENE CORP AGM - 14-05-2024

4. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Sustainability

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden proposes that the Board issue near and long-term science-based greenhouse gas reduction targets aligned with the Paris Agreement's ambition of limiting global temperature rise to 1.5°C and summarize plans to achieve them. "Despite acknowledging this risk, the Company's mitigation strategy falls short of what is needed to shield the Company and its investors from climate-related risks. While Centene currently reports Scope 1 and 2 and some categories of Scope 3 emissions, the Company has not published GHG targets or issued a climate transition plan. By contrast, peers UnitedHealth Group and Humana have committed to setting science-based targets with the Science Based Targets initiative (SBTi). Centene must take additional action to comprehensively address its climate impact and mitigate both the physical risks to its operations and the transition risks associated with new regulation and a global shift to a clean energy economy. Investors believe Centene should adopt 1.5°C-aligned science-based emissions reduction targets for its full carbon footprint and publish a climate transition plan - detailing the forward-looking, near-term, and quantitative actions the Company will take to achieve its medium- and long-term sustainability goals."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Environmental sustainability is an important part of Centene's operations. As a healthcare service company with employees either working remotely or in offices across the United States, our Company is continually focused on minimizing our environmental impact through responsible consumption of resources, pursuing projects that generate beneficial climate and environmental impacts beyond the Centene enterprise and measuring and disclosing our Company's environmental performance. Centene also recognizes that the populations we serve may be disproportionately impacted by environmental factors and that those factors could worsen with a changing climate. Centene is actively working to remove barriers to health and address the health-related social needs of our members impacted by environmental factors like heat, shelter and food security. In addition, we have aggressively responded to weather-related emergencies that impact our members, such as by providing needed supplies to thousands of Floridians following Hurricane Ian, as well as following other natural disasters. Over the past several years, the Company has materially expanded its initiatives and disclosures to address climate change. These efforts are summarized annually in the Company's Sustainability Report, TCFD report and SASB report. Included in the 2023 TCFD report are the results of our 2023 climate risk assessment, which updated the assessment of our Climate Change Task Force, and the Company's risk assessment and mitigation plans for a variety of environmental, climate and natural disaster risks."

PIRC analysis: The proponent is seeking an acceptable level of additional disclosure on the company's plans for a scenario compatible with the objectives of the Paris Agreement. Comprehensive reporting on climate material risks and opportunities is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing them of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company, as well as strategies put in place to manage those risks and opportunities, and the goals adopted to reduce and eliminate climate risk from the Company's operations, but also as a means of ensuring that the management and the Board continue to give due consideration to these issues. Additional disclosure would be of benefit to shareholders who could make a more informed judgement related to their investment and of the evaluation of the potential impact of different scenarios, including a 1.5 degrees Celsius scenario, on their businesses, strategy, and financial planning. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

1j. Re-elect Robert A. Niblock - Lead Independent Director

Lead Director, Chair of the Director Affairs Committee and Member of the Human Resources and Compensation Committee. Not considered to be independent due to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Director Affairs Committee and Human Resources and Compensation Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. It is also considered that a Lead Independent Director should be independent, in order to fulfil the responsibilities assigned to that role. Additionally, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Director Affairs Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Finally, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Revisit Pay Incentives for GHG Emission Reductions

Proponent's argument: The National Legal and Policy Center (NLPC) "request the Board of Directors' Human Resources and Compensation Committee to revisit its incentive guidelines for executive pay, to emphasize legitimate fiduciary goals and consider eliminating greenhouse gas reduction targets and other scientifically dubious goals from compensation inducements...The "scientific consensus" claims anthropogenically-driven climate change will result in catastrophic impacts to the environment, to the planet, and to humans. However, research increasingly shows worst-case scenarios are unlikely, and the potential consequences of carbon dioxide emissions (aka "plant food") have been greatly overstated... Despite the evidence that climate alarmism is overstated, ConocoPhillips's executive pay program incorporates unnecessary incentives to assumed combat climate change. According to the Company's 2023 Proxy Statement, the Human Resources and Compensation Committee set a Variable Cash Incentive Program target of 14 percent of total compensation for the CEO and 16 percent for other Named Executive Officers. "Strategic and ESG Milestones" are one of the five metrics used to determine VCIP for NEOs. These milestones include: "Demonstrated meaningful progress toward our Paris-aligned climate risk framework." "Progressed our long-term strategy by establishing new methane and flaring targets, executing emission reduction projects, and progressing CCS business development opportunities." These VCIP metrics are unscientific and create a breach of fiduciary duty. ConocoPhillips is an oil and gas company and should focus on what it does best. The company cannot afford to be left behind because of misguided executive pay incentives."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "ConocoPhillips continues to be guided by our value proposition of superior returns to stockholders through price cycles while executing against our Triple Mandate, which sets out three objectives to align our actions with the underlying realities of our business and demonstrates our commitment to create long-term value for our stockholders. Our Triple Mandate includes reliably and responsibly delivering oil and gas production to meet energy transition pathway demand, delivering returns on and of capital for our stockholders, and remaining focused on achieving our net-zero operational emissions ambition. Consistent with our philosophy of aligning our executive compensation programs with company strategy and with the long-term interests of our stockholders, our executive compensation programs and metrics remain aligned with our value proposition and Triple Mandate. We regularly meet with stockholders on a variety of topics, including our executive compensation programs. In recent years, during these engagements, an overwhelming majority of stockholders have sought to confirm how we link progress on our climate commitments to our executive compensation programs."

PIRC analysis: The requested review of performance measures tied to greenhouse gas reduction targets appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's alignment with net zero, or emission reduction targets, and focuses on executive behaviour with the clear intent to ensure that views against what the filers describe as "risky and costly political-schedule decarbonization" are represented within the company's political activities, as opposed to promoting accountability around the potential benefits of decarbonization and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, particularly the climate emergency, or avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to.

15. Approve Remuneration Policy for the COO

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy for the COO. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance.

6. Re-elect Andrew Learoyd - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board. The Chair is not considered to be independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Introduce an Independent Chair Rule

Proponent's argument: Kenneth Steiner asks that the Board adopt an enduring policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary in order that 2 separate people hold the office of the Chairman and the office of the CEO. "Whenever possible, the Chairman of the Board shall be an Independent Director. The Board has the discretion to select a Temporary Chairman of the Board who is not an Independent Director to serve while the Board is seeking an Independent Chairman of the Board on an accelerated basis. It is a best practice to adopt this policy soon. However this policy could be phased in when there is a contract renewal for our current CEO or for the next CEO transition."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have recently conducted extensive outreach with our shareholders which specifically included discussions regarding our current Board leadership structure. There was not a consensus view that we should change our current structure. In response to the feedback we did receive, we enhanced the duties and responsibilities of the Lead Independent Director. Our shareholders, in fact, expressed high regard for the performance of Peter Zaffino, our Chairman & CEO. Mr. Zaffino has provided strong leadership since joining the Company in 2017, including designing and successfully delivering on multiple complex initiatives resulting in sustainable, profitable growth, as well as recruiting talent throughout the organization. Mr. Zaffino has deep insurance expertise and is highly respected in the global insurance industry and by the Company's many stakeholders, including shareholders and the investment community more broadly. In 2023, Mr. Zaffino led efforts to broaden and diversify the skills and experience of the Board through the successful recruitment of three new independent directors: Diana Murphy, Vanessa Wittman and Jimmy Dunne. Because our Chair is not independent, the Board selected a non-management director to serve as Lead Independent Director as required by AIG's By-Laws and Corporate Governance Guidelines. The Board believes that a Lead Independent Director with well-defined responsibilities enhances the effectiveness of the independent directors, improves risk management and oversight, and provides a channel for independent directors to candidly raise issues or concerns for the Board's consideration."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Director Resignation By-Law

Proponent's argument: New York City Carpenters Pension Fund request that the Board establish a director resignation bylaw to enhance director accountability. "The Proposal requests that the Board establish a director resignation bylaw to enhance director accountability. The Company has established in its bylaws a majority vote standard for use in an uncontested director election, an election in which the number of nominees equal the number of open board seats. Under applicable state corporate law, a director's term extends until his or her successor is elected and qualified, or until he or she resigns or is removed from office. Therefore, an incumbent director who fails to receive the required vote for election under majority vote standards continues to serve as a "holdover" director until the next annual meeting. A Company governance policy currently addresses the continued status of an incumbent director who fails to be re-elected by requiring such director to tender his or her resignation for Board consideration."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board believes this proposal is overbroad, has the potential to harm shareholder interests, and ultimately is unnecessary given the Company's strong governance practices. Further, imposing a uncompromising standard that forces a board to accept an irrevocable resignation on file without regard to the specific circumstances strips the Board of its discretion in determining the board composition that serves the best interests of AIG and our shareholders in light of the Company's needs and circumstances at the time. The Board believes it is critically important to maintain the flexibility to choose the right mix of skills, expertise and experience represented on the Board to best fit the Company's strategic goals. By requiring a mandatory director resignation without regard to the circumstances, the Board's effectiveness is unilaterally constrained, which ultimately harms shareholders. Further, the shareholder proposal would eliminate the Board's ability to act in the interests of AIG and its shareholders by limiting its decision-making authority. The Board believes that our Company and our shareholders benefit from the Board's judgment in exercising its discretion as to whether to accept a director's irrevocable resignation on file based on the facts and circumstances at the time."

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. PHILLIPS 66 AGM - 15-05-2024

4. Shareholder Resolution: Report Analyzing the Impact of the "System Change Scenario" on the Chemicals Business

Proponent's argument: Warren Wilson College requests that "that Philips 66 issue a report, at reasonable cost and omitting proprietary information, addressing whether and how a significant reduction in virgin plastic demand, as set forth in Breaking the Plastic Wave's System Change Scenario, would affect the Company's financial position and the assumptions underlying its financial statements." The proponent argues that "Plastic, with a lifecycle social cost at least ten times its market price, threatens the world's oceans, wildlife, and public health. Concern about the growing scale and impact of global plastic pollution has elevated the issue to crisis levels. Of particular concern are single-use plastics (SUPs), which make up the bulk of the 24-34 million metric tons of plastic ending up in waterways annually. Without drastic action, this amount could triple by 2040. A shift from virgin plastic production is critical to reducing plastic pollution. The Environmental Protection Agency's draft strategy to prevent plastic pollution calls for a voluntary reduction in production. A robust pathway addressing plastic pollution is presented in the widely respected Breaking the Plastic Wave report, which found that plastic leakage into the ocean can be reduced 80 percent under its System Change Scenario (SCS), but it requires a significant absolute reduction of virgin SUPs. In response to the plastic pollution crisis and the necessity of reducing plastic production, countries and major packaging brands are beginning to drive reductions in plastic use. This will affect the plastic production supply chain."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Board states that "CPChem conducts climate-specific scenario analyses using scenarios developed by independent third parties to simulate potential impacts of climate-related risks and assess its business resilience. CPChem also provides a summary of the results of these analyses in each of its Sustainability Report and its Climate Risk Report, both published in 2022 and publicly available at www.cpchem.com/sustainability. We encourage our shareholders to read these reports to learn more about CPChem's sustainability programs, practices, and goals.

CPChem selected the Sustainable Development Scenario and Net Zero Scenario published by the International Energy Agency (IEA), and the Increased Recycling Scenario and Advanced Circular Economy Scenario published by Bloomberg New Energy Finance (BNEF) to test its portfolio. CPChem used the IEA energy-transition scenarios as the basis for testing how potential climate-related risks and opportunities might impact CPChem under different emissions trajectories, while the BNEF scenarios were used to review potential risk implications to CPChem under a world of increasing plastics circularity. CPChem's assets show long-term resilience under multiple market conditions through increased revenue growth."

PIRC analysis: Reporting on sustainability issues is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing shareholders of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company, but also as a means of ensuring that the management and board of a company gives due consideration to these issues. The company indicates that it already has initiatives in this area. However, such reporting takes the form of estimates of measures such as percentage of packaging worldwide which was recyclable, compostable or biodegradable, or percentage of waste which was diverted from landfill. However, company's reporting seems to present no better information on how much actually is recycled, or what goals there are for achieving either 50% recycling or more. For this reason the report requested would appear to be necessary to assess where the Company has made mistakes and how it can remedy those. Support for the resolution is recommended. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on EEO Policy Risk

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that "BlackRock, Inc. issue a public report detailing the potential risks associated with omitting "viewpoint" and "ideology" from its written equal employment opportunity (EEO) policy. The report should be available within a reasonable timeframe, prepared at a reasonable expense and omit proprietary information." The Proponent supports the proposal with the following: "BlackRock does not explicitly prohibit discrimination based on viewpoint or ideology in its written EEO policy. BlackRock's lack of a company-wide best practice EEO policy sends mixed signals to company employees and prospective employees and calls into question the extent to which individuals are protected due to inconsistent state policies and the absence of a relevant federal protection. Approximately half of Americans live and work in a jurisdiction with no legal protections if their employer takes action against them for their political activities or discriminates on the basis of viewpoint in the workplace. Companies with inclusive policies are better able to recruit the most talented employees from a broad labor pool, resolve complaints internally to avoid costly litigation or reputational damage, and minimize employee turnover. Moreover, inclusive policies contribute to more efficient human capital management by eliminating the need to maintain different policies in different locations."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Company states that "BlackRock is committed to cultivating an inclusive work environment where everyone has fair access to opportunities and feels seen, heard, valued and respected. We believe that diversity of thought, experiences, and backgrounds, in all its forms, helps BlackRock build stronger and better teams, avoid group think, and solve tough problems, today and in the future. As discussed below, our existing policies, including our Equal Employment Opportunity, Non-Harassment and Retaliation Prevention Policy ("EEO Policy"), reflect this commitment. The EEO Policy, which is applicable to the Americas region (excluding Canada), establishes our expectations for a productive and positive work environment, alerts employees to their legal rights under applicable laws, and provides information on options for raising concerns either internally or externally. As stated in the EEO Policy, BlackRock does not discriminate against any employee or applicant because of race, color, creed, religion, sex, pregnancy status, pregnancy-related conditions, national origin, ancestry, mental or physical disability, medical condition, age, veteran status, military status, citizenship status, marital status, familial status, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity or expression, genetic information, political affiliation, unemployment status, or any other characteristic protected by law (referred to as "Protected Status")."

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Introduce an Independent Chair Rule

Proponent's argument:

Bluebell Capital Partners Limited request "The Board of Directors of the Corporation, shall elect a Chairman of the Board of Directors who must be an Independent Director (and if the Board determines that a Chairman who was independent when selected is no longer independent, the Board shall select a new Chairman who satisfies the requirements of the policy within a reasonable amount of time). The Proponent states "The CEO of BlackRock is also the Chairman. The role of the CEO is to run the company. The role of the Board is to provide independent oversight of the CEO. Therefore, in general terms, there is an inherent conflict of interest for a CEO to act as her/his own oversight as Chair. Whilst each situation needs to be reviewed on a case-by-case basis, the lack of independent oversight within BlackRock's Board, can be evidenced by the numerous contradictions and inconsistencies between BlackRock's ESG strategy and its implementation. BlackRock has an oversized Board with seventeen Directors, a joint CEO/Chair and an outgoing Lead Independent Director who has been on the Board for more than two decades. Additionally, key committees such as Risk and Audit are respectively chaired by a Non-Independent Director and a Director who has served on the Board for more than nine years."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Company states "The Board determined once again this year that the service of Mr. Fink as both BlackRock's CEO and Chairman is the most appropriate and effective leadership structure for the Board and the Company at the present time. Mr. Fink has served as our Chairman and CEO since founding BlackRock in 1988, and he brings over 30 years of strategic leadership experience and an unparalleled knowledge of BlackRock's business, operations and risks. In his time as Chairman and CEO, BlackRock has delivered industry-leading growth and long-term financial returns for our shareholders, including 9,000% total return since our IPO. Under his leadership, BlackRock has gone through several transformative acquisitions, including the acquisitions of Merrill Lynch Investment Management (MLIM) and Barclays Global Investors (BGI). The acquisition of GIP announced earlier this year is expected to further evolve the firm, and we believe it will position the firm for success in the fast-growing infrastructure market. The proponent is an activist investor based in the United Kingdom. In this proposal and in other forums, the proponent has made multiple misguided, incorrect and contradictory criticisms of BlackRock that are rooted in its disagreement with proxy voting decisions made by BlackRock's Investment Stewardship team ("BIS") on behalf of the Company's clients. This includes instances where BIS did not support the proponent's campaigns as BIS did not consider doing so to be in the best long-term financial interests of our clients."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions. 7. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Proxy Voting Record and Policies for Climate Change-Related Proposals

Proponent's argument: Mercy Investment Services, Inc. request that "the Board of Directors initiate a review of both BlackRock's 2023 proxy voting record and proxy voting policies related to climate change, prepared at reasonable cost, omitting proprietary information." The proponent states that "BlackRock is a respected global financial services leader providing multiple investment options for clients addressing environmental, social and governance (ESG) topics. Research by BlackRock noted long-term inaction on climate change could reduce global economic output by nearly 25 percent over the next two decades, making addressing climate change an urgent and material issue for investors. CEO Larry Fink reiterated in his 2023 letter to investors that the firm "views climate risk as an investment risk". However, despite the clearly articulated recognition of the materiality of climate risk, neither BlackRock's proxy voting guidelines, nor its voting record reflects this view. According to ShareAction, in 2022 BlackRock ranked 62nd of 68 asset managers, supporting only 28% of environmental resolutions. In 2023, this support continued to decline sharply: BlackRock supported only 7% of the environmental and social shareholder proposals on proxy statements (BlackRock annual stewardship report)."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Company states that "The proponent's supporting statement suggests that it is motivated by a disagreement with BIS' voting on behalf of funds and clients with respect to certain shareholder proposals. BlackRock's approach to climate-related risks and opportunities is based on our fundamental role as a fiduciary to our clients. As a fiduciary, BIS undertakes its voting and engagement responsibilities with a focus on advancing clients' long-term economic interests. Climate risk and the transition to a low-carbon economy are economic factors, like interest rates and geopolitics, that may impact the long-term financial returns of portfolios. Accordingly, where these factors are material to a given issuer, BIS and portfolio managers will consider them. It is not BIS' role, however, to engineer a specific decarbonization outcome in the real economy."

PIRC analysis: Although the board claims to have no direct responsibility for proxy voting conducted by the advisers on their behalf, it is considered that the board should monitor closely that the votes cast by the advisers are aligned with the company's policy on climate change. It is a fiduciary duty of the adviser to vote shares in portfolio companies solely in the best interests of their clients. As such, the company should monitor that this has effectively occurred and report on that to shareholders. Comprehensive reporting on proxy votes on climate-related resolutions is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing them of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company, as well as strategies put in place to manage those risks and opportunities, and the goals adopted to reduce and eliminate climate risk from the company's portfolio, but also as a means of ensuring that the management and the Board continue to give due consideration to these issues. Additional disclosure would allow shareholders to make a more informed judgement related to their investment and of the evaluation of the potential impact of different scenarios, including a 1.5 degrees Celsius scenario, on their businesses, strategy, and financial planning. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of a non-financial performance criteria. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Introduce an Independent Chair Rule

Proponent's argument:

John Chevedden requests that "the Board of Directors adopt an enduring policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary in order that 2 separate people hold the office of the Chairman and the office of the CEO." The Proponent argues that "Whenever possible, the Chairman of the Board shall be an Independent Director.

The Board has the discretion to select a Temporary Chairman of the Board who is not an Independent Director to serve while the Board is seeking an Independent Chairman of the Board on an expedited basis. It is a best practice to adopt this policy soon. However this policy could be phased in when there is a contract renewal for our current CEO or for the next CEO transition. The roles of Chairman and CEO are fundamentally different and should be held by 2 directors, a CEO and a Chairman who is completely independent of the CEO and Intercontinental Exchange. The job of the CEO is to manage the company. The job of the Chairman is to oversee the CEO. A lead director is no substitute for an independent Board Chairman. A lead director can be given a list of duties but there is no rule that prevents the Chairman from overriding the lead director in any of the so-called lead director duties and ignoring the advice of the lead director." Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Company states that "The Board of Directors believes that our current leadership structure has functioned well, effectively balances a highly capable management team with appropriate safeguards and oversight by independent directors, and has produced strong financial and operating results. [...] Selecting an appropriate leadership structure is one of the most important tasks of any board. To meet their fiduciary duties, directors must have the discretion to use their insights, experience and judgment to make decisions with respect to the structure of the Company's leadership - with the understanding that stockholders will hold directors accountable for these decisions through the annual election of each director nominee. If the policy and governing document changes requested by the Proposal are implemented, going forward, the Board would be constrained in exercising the appropriate discretion. Such limitations would be detrimental to the Company and its stockholders because companies and their stockholders are best served when boards make leadership determinations on a case-by-case basis for who is best to serve in leadership roles based on the facts at any given time, and not pursuant to a predetermined policy."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions.

16. Amend Articles: Hybrid/Virtual-only Shareholder Meetings

It is proposed to amend the articles in order to allow virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification on what grounds a virtual-only meeting can be called, it is recommended that Camden oppose.

22. Say on Climate

Governance

The policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability.

There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change and decarbonisation on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.

There is evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board and senior management of climate-related issues.

The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.

Disclosure

The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.

The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.

The company has not pledged to refrain from financing new plans based on fossil fuels. Fossil fuels financing is risky, with the marginal cost of renewables being cheaper, and energy security being increasingly seen in terms of non-fossil sources.

PIRC Analysis

The company has said it will be carbon neutral by 2050 and has extended this commitment to its Scope 1, Scope 2 and Scope 3 emissions. However, the strategy does not seemingly address the challenges the company faces, with competition from renewable energy potentially putting fossil fuel businesses out of business on grounds of costs. The company does not seem to have a clear plan for the competitive aspects of the energy transition and there does not seem to be a sharp target or commitment. Reviewing the strategy according to new scenarios concerning decarbonization in order to be aligned with customer sentiment or other changes in society, does not seemingly puts the company in the position of taking the lead in decarbonization. Rather, it appears too accommodating and inconsistent with the policy objectives and some of the targets. Under such assumption, there is no guarantee that the targets would be reviewed to a lower ambition or that they will not be met at all.

23. Shareholder Resolution: Align Scope 3 reduction targets with the goal of the Paris Climate Agreement

Proponent's argument: "The world has signed the Paris Agreement, pledging to limit global warming to well below 2°C and to pursue efforts to limit warming to 1.5°C. Failure to do so will have dramatic effects for society at large, including the global economy. Greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions are the leading driver of global warming.

The Company is a leading contributor to global GHG emissions. [...] The Company's medium-term targets are not Paris-aligned. Shell's medium-term targets covering Scope 3 are a decrease of the Net Carbon Intensity (NCI) of 20% by 2030 and 45% by 2035 (at the time of filing this resolution), compared to 2016 levels. The Climate Action 100+ benchmark states that the Company's medium-term GHG emissions reduction target(s) are not aligned with the goal of limiting global warming to 1.5°C. No third-party source indicates that Shell's medium-term targets are aligned with a 1.5°C warming scenario. [...] A lack of Paris-aligned targets poses significant risks to the Company. These risks include: Regulation: As countries work to achieve their commitments under the Paris Agreement, more stringent regulations should be implemented. This risks leaving planned oil and gas projects stranded, which would result in significant losses to the Company. Uncertainty about the timing of the effects of climate change and shifts in public sentiment may bring about a disorderly transition, resulting in abrupt implementation of regulation, negatively affecting the profitability of fossil fuels and further increasing the risks of stranded assets. Loss of market opportunity: As the global energy market transitions toward a net-zero energy system, there will be increased demand for low-carbon energy products. The Company risks losing the opportunities that this demand presents. Litigation: Instances of climate litigation against oil majors are increasingly sharply. As the legal framework around this becomes more established and liability more certain, the Company is exposed to increasing financial liability. Carbon lock-in: By investing recent record profits in continued fossil fuel extraction, the Company risks locking itself into an unsustainable business model."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Your Directors believe that Resolution 23 is against both good governance and shareholders' interests, and also has negative consequences for our customers. The resolution, if approved, would have a material negative financial impact on the Company and its ambition to be the investment case through the energy transition. [...] As outlined in Shell's Articles of Association, a shareholder resolution is a Special Resolution, which, if passed, would be binding on the Company. Resolution 23 states within its text that it is an "advisory" resolution. This is not correct. A Special Resolution requires at least 75% of the votes cast to be in favour. If passed, it would be binding on the Company, and form part of the Company's constitution. [...] A special resolution should provide a company with a clear course of action. Resolution 23 fails to do this. It claims to be advisory (which it is not), it is unclear, generic, and attempts to remove the setting of strategic targets from the Board's control, thereby creating confusion as to Board and shareholder accountabilities. [...] Shell believes it plays a positive role in the transport sector by offering low-carbon energy alternatives like electric vehicle charging and biofuels. Shell also supports LNG as a critical fuel in the energy transition, as it replaces coal, supports energy security, and is an intermittent fuel to renewable power by providing grid stability when wind and solar power are unavailable. Shell is not accountable for customers' need for transport and power usage across the world. Such a representation of accountability delays the energy transition by being unrealistic about the role of the supply side of the energy system. "

PIRC analysis: Scope 3 emissions (all indirect emissions that occur in the value chain of the reporting company, including both upstream and downstream emissions) can be indicators of exposure to climate risks, such as carbon and energy 'hot spots' in the supply chain or use of products. The setting of medium term targets will help the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain emissions more proactively, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues deriving from this climate-related approach
It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CFO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The ratio of CFO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. Company policy prohibits dividend accrual on unvested share options which is welcome. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy fall below the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is at least five years and therefore considered sufficiently long-term.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 5. Approval of the TBC Group plc Combined Incentive Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's new Combined Incentive Plan (CIP). The CIP is a discretionary incentive plan designed to reward employees for their work for the TBC Bank group. The CIP measures performance over a single financial year, after which awards are made in the form of Ordinary Shares, which are subject to holding periods, or share awards which are subject to vesting based on service and a further long-term performance measure. From 2024 onwards, the CIP will be the sole variable pay arrangement for the CEO and any other executive director, replacing participation in the existing annual bonus and the TBC Bank Group PLC Long Term Incentive Plan (with respect to new awards in both cases). The CIP will expire at the tenth anniversary of its approval by shareholders. Awards to executive directors are subject to a robust 3-step performance measurement monitored by the Remuneration Committee, with "Performance Gateway" criteria (described below) to determine any pay-out, a challenging scorecard of measures linked to Key Performance Indicators ("KPIs") which drives the size of Awards after one year and then a long-term TSR modifier to incentivise shareholder performance over the full KPI assessment year and then the following two years, which can reduce the outcome of the annual KPI performance assessment.

Incentive schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Proponent's argument: Jing Zhao proposed that the Board of Amazon.com, Inc. establish a Public Policy Committee. "The corporate governance is like a social contract between the public (including shareholders, employees, users and the general public) and the corporate board: the public gives the board a free hand to run the corporate business so there is no companywide union in Amazon, there is no employee representation on the board, and the board is nominated and elected without any competition (the number of candidates is the same number of board seats). Particularly for Amazon, the board needs further efforts to prevent abusing the public trust. About 7% of the companies in the S&P 500 had a separate board committee responsible for public policy. Considering Amazon's giant size and complex operations of business worldwide, even if there are only 0.7% of the companies in the S&P 500 having a public policy committee, Amazon must be one of them."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We believe that our current Board and committee structure already provides an appropriate level of oversight of the types of public policy, environmental, social, governmental, regulatory, and human capital matters raised in the proposal. The full Board has overall responsibility for risk oversight and regularly oversees and reviews reports from management on various aspects of our business, including related risks and strategies for addressing them. In addition, the Board has delegated responsibility related to certain risks to our standing Board committees, which are comprised solely of independent directors. Under its charter, the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is responsible for overseeing and monitoring the Company's policies and initiatives relating to our environmental, sustainability, and corporate social responsibility practices, including the Company's progress on The Climate Pledge, risks related to human rights and ethical business practices, and risks related to our operations and supply chain and engagement with customers, suppliers, and communities. The Committee also regularly reviews the Company's public policy, government relations, and public relations initiatives. In addition, the Leadership Development and Compensation Committee is responsible for overseeing and monitoring our strategies and policies related to human capital management within our workforce, including with respect to policies on diversity, equity, and inclusion, our workplace environment and safety, and corporate culture."

PIRC analysis: A dedicated board committee with properly qualified membership would seem to be an important addition for the preservation of shareholder capital, given the magnitude of the potential effect of environmental and social risks on the businesses. Properly skilled directors on a dedicated board committee would ensure to shareholders that these topics are embedded into the decision-making process, that directors understand the future commitments of the company and not look at environmental or social challenges as 'nice-to' topics, or purely from a legal compliance perspective. Response to issues tied to environment and society: these are not solely related to risk but also to opportunity.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Corporate Financial Sustainability Report

Proponent's argument National Center for Public Policy Research request that the Board of Directors create a board committee on corporate financial sustainability to oversee and review the impact of the Company's policy positions, advocacy, partnerships and charitable giving on social and political matters, and the effect of those actions on the Company's financial sustainability. "The Company takes public and politically divisive positions over issues of significant social policy concern, including discriminating in service provision against mainstream viewpoints with which its executives differ. Likewise, it opposed common-sense voting-integrity provisions that most Americans of all surface-characteristic categories support. [...] The Company supports divisive organizations and takes public stances on divisive issues that alienate current and prospective consumers and draw even more regulatory and legislative attention than it's already under. Recent events have made clear that company bottom-lines, and therefore value to shareholders, drop when companies take overtly political and divisive positions that alienate consumers. Following Bud Light's embrace of partisanship and disparagement of its customer base, its revenue fell $395 million in North America when compared to the same time a year ago."

This amounts to roughly 10 percent of its revenue in the months following its leap into contentious politics. Target Corporation's market cap fell over $15 billion amid backlash for similar actions. And Disney stock fell 44 percent in 2022-its worst performance in nearly 50 years-amid its decision to put extreme partisan agendas ahead of parents' rights."

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We believe that our current Board and committee structure already provides an appropriate level of oversight of the types of matters raised in the proposal. The full Board has overall responsibility for risk oversight and regularly oversees and reviews reports from management on various aspects of our business, including related risks and strategies for addressing them. In addition, the Board has delegated responsibility related to certain risks to our standing Board committees, which are comprised solely of independent directors. For example, under its charter, the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is responsible for overseeing and monitoring the Company's policies and initiatives relating to our corporate social responsibility practices, including human rights and ethical business practices, and risks related to our operations and engagement with customers, suppliers, and communities. The Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee also regularly reviews the Company's public policy, government relations, and public relations initiatives. In addition, the Audit Committee is responsible for overseeing our policies, procedures, and reports with respect to political contributions and lobbying expenses, including donations to trade associations and social welfare organizations, and for our risk assessment and risk management policies. Finally, the Leadership Development and Compensation Committee is responsible for overseeing and monitoring our strategies and policies related to human capital management within our workforce, including with respect to policies on diversity, equity, and inclusion, our workplace environment and safety, and corporate culture. These committees regularly meet with, and receive updates from, management on Amazon's policies, practices, and initiatives relating to such matters. "

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. Increased disclosure that links charitable spending with Financial Sustainability would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. Nevertheless, the identification of donations to certain charities as the sole or at least a direct responsible for a company's stock price is disputable. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology with the intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company may donate. On the contrary, the fact that the company provides donations to different charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all charities or all viewpoints should be equally acceptable.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Customer Due Diligence

Proponent's argument: American Baptist Home Mission Society request the Board of Directors commission an independent third-party report, at reasonable cost and omitting proprietary information, assessing Amazon's customer due diligence process to determine whether customers' use of its products and services with surveillance, computer vision, or cloud storage capabilities contributes to human rights violations or violates international humanitarian law. "Inadequate customer due diligence presents material privacy and data security risks, as well as legal, regulatory, and reputational risks, which are particularly pertinent when considering the sale and use of sensitive and emerging technologies. Amazon's product portfolio contains several products with potentially grave misuse capabilities. Despite Amazon's indefinite moratorium of its Rekognition face comparison feature, it has not clarified how Rekognition is still used by police outside of "criminal investigations." Additionally, Amazon's Ring continues to infringe on citizens' privacy, despite an audit and Ring's resulting changes. Its vague standards regarding information sharing with law enforcement, absent consent, led to sharing of videos with law enforcement at least 11 times in 2022. Ring continues to expand its thousands of police partnerships."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "When used properly and responsibly, the technology products and services offered by Amazon provide substantial benefits to society and the communities and organizations that use them. For example, since being introduced in 2016, non-profit, advocacy, and government groups have used Amazon Rekognition's facial recognition capabilities to protect human rights, including tracking and stopping child exploitation and rescuing victims of human trafficking, as well as locating hundreds of missing children. Similarly, Ring continues to innovate by inventing home security products that solve real customer problems and assisting community members in sharing important community information and connecting with each other. These are just a few of the numerous beneficial applications of these technologies. The proposal requests that the Company prepare a report about Amazon's process for customer due diligence to determine whether customers' use of certain of our products or services contributes to human rights violations or violates international humanitarian law. Conversations around responsible development and use of AI/ML systems are happening around the world among government, industry, academia, and other groups. Amazon is an active participant and contributor to these conversations, and Amazon teams and subject matter experts are helping lead the industry on these very issues. As discussed below, we have conscientiously acted to review and address the concerns expressed in the proposal and transparently provided information regarding our actions to the public."

PIRC analysis: The company's provision of data and cloud services to countries linked to potential human rights violations may expose it to legal, financial, and reputational risks. Concerns over facial recognition tools have linked these products to racial bias and risks to privacy and human rights, which have been acknowledged by the biggest players in the industry. The proposal does not request an outright ban on sales of these products or services either to the government or to governments representing repressive regimes; more reasonably, it suggests the Company to perform own due diligence to assess the level of risk of violating human rights and civil liberties represented by its product being used by any customer, and the extent to which said product can be sold to repressive governments. While the company's response indicates that some work has been done in this area, more could be done. As such the request for the assessment appears reasonable. 7. Shareholder Resolution: Additional Reporting on Lobbying

Proponent's argument: The Province of Saint Joseph of the Capuchin Order request the preparation of a report, updated annually, disclosing: 1. Company policy and procedures governing lobbying, both direct and indirect, and grassroots lobbying communications. 2. Payments by Amazon used for (a) direct or indirect lobbying or (b) grassroots lobbying communications, in each case including the amount of the payment and the recipient." Companies can give unlimited amounts to third party groups that spend millions on lobbying and undisclosed grassroots activity. Amazon lists support of $10,000 or more to 588 trade associations (TAs), social welfare groups (SWGs) and nonprofits for 2022, yet fails to disclose its payments, or the amounts used for lobbying. Amazon belongs to the Chamber of Commerce and Business Roundtable (BRT), which have spent over $2.2 billion on lobbying since 1998, supports SWGs that lobby like the National Taxpayers Union and Taxpayers Protection Alliance, and funds controversial nonprofits like giving $400,000 to the Independent Women's Forum, which has drawn scrutiny for "using anti-trans scaremongering" to oppose the Equal Rights Amendment. Amazon's lack of disclosure presents reputational risks when its lobbying contradicts company public positions. Amazon strives to be the "Earth's Best Employer," yet has attracted scrutiny for lobbying against workers' right to organize. Amazon cofounded the Climate Pledge, yet the BRT lobbied against the Inflation Reduction Act, and the Chamber reportedly has been a "central actor" in dissuading climate legislation over a two-decade period. Amazon has drawn scrutiny for avoiding federal income taxes, the BRT has lobbied against a new minimum corporate tax. And Amazon does not belong to the American Legislative Exchange Council but is represented by the Chamber and NetChoice, which each sit on its Private Enterprise Advisory Council."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "When assessing potential misalignments, there are no bright-line rules. We evaluate each situation carefully using a principles-based approach and take appropriate action depending on the facts and circumstances of the potential misalignment. While our public policy positions are carefully considered and deeply held, the facts and circumstances of any potential misalignment can differ and change over time, meaning that these situations do not lend themselves to rigid standards for evaluation. In 2022, we published a report describing our approach to mitigating the risk of misalignment of our lobbying activities with our positions. As described in the report, our approach to mitigating these risks is carefully considered and the methods of escalation we choose depend on the facts and circumstances of each situation and the organization in question. [...] Nevertheless, we understand the risk that our membership in certain organizations may from time to time be viewed as indirectly funding positions that are inconsistent with our views on certain public policy matters. We take a number of actions to mitigate this risk. The Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee regularly reviews Amazon's public policy and government relations initiatives. As stated in the Audit Committee's charter, the Committee, which is comprised solely of independent directors, annually reviews and discusses with management Amazon's policies, procedures, and reports on political contributions and lobbying expenses. In addition, the Audit Committee and our Senior Vice President, Global Public Policy & General Counsel, annually review the U.S. Political Engagement Policy and Statement, related procedures, and a report on all of our campaign contributions and lobbying expenses, including contributions made to organizations such as trade associations, coalitions, charities, and social welfare organizations that may engage in indirect lobbying on behalf of the Company."

PIRC analysis: Political spending is considered to be a different issue than lobbying expenditures. Links to public disclosures of lobbying at the state and federal level are not the same as full disclosure published on the company's website. Moreover, it is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders to be open about lobbying activities and so avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Racial and Gender Pay Gap Reporting

Proponent's argument: Stanley Monroe and Laurie Carson, represented by Arjuna Capital request Amazon report on median pay gaps across race and gender, including associated policy, reputational, competitive, and operational risks, and risks related to recruiting and retaining diverse talent. "Pay inequities persist across race and gender and pose substantial risks to companies and society. Black workers' median annual earnings represent 77 percent of white wages. The median income for women working full time is 84 percent that of men. Intersecting race, Black women earn 76 percent and Latina women 63 percent. At the current rate, women will not reach pay equity until 2059, Black women in 2130, and Latina women in 2224. [...] Despite ongoing controversy, Amazon continues to ignore reporting unadjusted median pay gaps which would provide crucial insights into how well the Company is managing access to job opportunities and employee pay. Median pay gap data, as opposed to diversity data alone, shows, quite literally, how Amazon assigns value to employees through the roles they inhabit and pay they receive. Median gap reporting provides a digestible and comparable data point to determine progress over time."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Amazon already provides statistical reporting on our workforce diversity and pay equity. We annually publish gender and race representation information on our diversity and inclusion website, which includes representation by job type, such as field and customer support employees, corporate employees, and senior leaders. In addition, to provide even greater transparency, we publish our consolidated EEO-1 reports. Amazon also annually provides information on compensation by gender and by race/ethnicity. Our reported gender and racial/ethnic group pay statistics demonstrate that Amazon pays our employees comparably when analyzing the work of people performing the same jobs. When evaluating 2023 compensation, including base compensation, cash bonuses, and stock, our reported data demonstrates that women globally and in the United States earned 99.8 cents and 99.9 cents, respectively, for every dollar that men earned performing the same jobs, and racial/ethnic minorities in the United States earned a dollar for every dollar that white employees earned performing the same jobs."

PIRC analysis: The proponents request for the company to report its gender pay gap. The requested disclosure is considered reasonable and would underpin the Company's efforts in fostering diversity and thereby enhance its reputation and reduce the risks associated with its human capital and business. While the Company has released statistics surrounding its gender pay parity and it appears to be committed to equal opportunities, it is considered nevertheless beneficial for the company to report further, as the median gender pay gap will show how many or how few women there are in senior positions at the company.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Respect Civil Liberties in Digital Services

Proponent's argument: The American Family Association request that the Board of Directors of Amazon conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to denying or restricting service to users or customers based on their viewpoint under "hate speech," "misinformation," and related policies, other terms of use or content management policies, or any other policies or practices, and how such viewpoint discrimination impacts users, customers, and other individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "Digital service providers (DSPs) control access to critical services and platforms that drive innovation in the American economy and facilitate expression and the open exchange of information across the globe. These companies have unprecedented power to censor speech. And they are under increasing pressure to remove unpopular religious and political views from the marketplace. Respecting fundamental freedoms, like free speech and religious liberty, drives healthy discourse and tolerance for diverse views. Amazon, Inc. can and should promote these freedoms to best serve its diverse users and promote a healthy market and marketplace of ideas. Economic growth also requires innovation, and that requires the freedom to challenge the status quo. If DSPs build their own social credit system, they are going to lock out Americans from some of the best tools for innovation and growth."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We keep in mind the cultural differences and sensitivities of our global community when making decisions on products, and as a store, we've chosen to offer a very broad range of viewpoints. We strive to maximize selection for all customers, even if we do not agree with the message or sentiment of all of the products. [...] In addition to the policies, programs, and initiatives that support our commitment to diversity and respect for people from all backgrounds, we have risk management processes to protect against risks to the Company. The Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee oversees and monitors our policies and initiatives relating to corporate social responsibility, including human rights and ethical business practices, and related risks most relevant to the Company's operations and engagement with customers, suppliers, and communities; and the Audit Committee oversees, among other things, our risk assessment and risk management policies, including management of operational risks."

PIRC analysis: The proposal does not request the company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of misrepresenting facts and allowing or even inciting misinformation by its platform being used by any customer. Rather, the proponent appears to consider that misinformation (such as denying the reality of anthropogenic global warming, or that of the COVID pandemic) should be treated with the same dignity of scientific and fact-based information, on the basis of a flawed assumption of freedom of expression. Research has shown that misinformation has deep impact across society as a whole and appear to be tied to lower-income section of society. This proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented on the platform, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to.

10. Shareholder Resolution: Additional Reporting on Stakeholder Impacts

Proponent's argument: International Brotherhood of Teamsters General Fund request the Board of Directors prepare a report disclosing how Amazon.com, Inc., ("Amazon" or the "Company") is addressing the impact of its climate change strategy on relevant stakeholders, including but not limited to employees, workers in its supply chain, and communities in which it operates, consistent with the "Just Transition" guidelines of the International Labor Organization and indicators of the World Benchmarking Alliance. "Amazon has pledged to reach net-zero carbon emissions by 2040, a goal that suggests dramatic transformations in the way Amazon operates its vast transportation and logistical networks, bringing with it significant changes to the Company's human capital needs. We believe it is crucial Amazon develop its decarbonization strategy with a systematic focus on ensuring a just and equitable energy transition. A 2022 study by the World Benchmarking Alliance found that the largest transportation companies-many of which approximate Amazon's own transportation network-were ill-prepared to manage the social impacts of decarbonizing, placing millions of workers at risk."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our commitment to The Climate Pledge, Amazon's goal to reach net zero carbon across our operations by 2040, requires investing in the communities where we operate and where our workers live. As stated in our 2023 Community Impact Report, at Amazon, we use our infrastructure, resources, and spirit of invention to address some of the most acute challenges in our communities. We are committed to sustainability and social responsibility as outlined in the Amazon Global Human Rights Principles, which manifests our commitment to the people, workers, and communities that support our entire value chain so that they are treated with fundamental dignity and respect. [...]In addition to our efforts to reduce the environmental impact of our operations, we strive to have a positive impact on other aspects of the communities in which we operate by driving economic growth, investing in affordable housing, and supporting non-profits and community organizations. For example, in 2021, we established the Amazon Housing Equity Fund to provide more than $2 billion in below-market loans and grants to preserve and create affordable homes for individuals and families earning moderate to low incomes in our three hometown communities-Washington state's Puget Sound region; the Washington, D.C., and Arlington, Virginia, metropolitan areas; and Nashville, Tennessee."

PIRC analysis: While the company appears to acknowledge and take account of a just transition to some degree, it is not clear that the company has done so to an extent that would meet the requests of the resolution. The integration of these concerns into the governance structure (including executive compensation, stakeholder and workforce engagement processes, and Board oversight) seems to acknowledge the importance of the issue. The report also sets out a couple of examples regarding how the company is considering worker and community needs in light of a transition to a zero-carbon economy. However, the company response appears to short of a commitment to providing systemic approach to a just transition of its workforce and communities: while the report explains how in certain situations staff is being transitioned to green jobs and away from fossil-fuel related jobs, it is not clear if enough jobs are being created to offset the job losses. Also, it is not clear if and how the just transition fits within the climate strategy in relation to workers and communities. Lastly, the board appears to discuss sustainability issues. However, it is not clear how or to what extent just transition is included in the board's discussions or the company's governance. The point of a just transition is that the 'E', 'S', and 'G' factors within an organisation and economy cannot be siloed. They have to be mutually supporting elements of a just transition approach. This integration of ESG factors is not evident in the company's report or approach. On this basis, support is recommended.

11. Shareholder Resolution: Reporting on Packaging

Proponent's argument:As You Sow request the Amazon Board issue a report, at reasonable expense and excluding proprietary information, describing how the Company could reduce its plastics footprint by committing to make all packaging curbside recyclable, reusable, or compostable. "This growing plastic pollution crisis poses increasing risks to Amazon. Corporations could face an annual financial risk of approximately $100 billion should governments require them to cover the waste management costs of the packaging they produce, a policy that is increasingly being enacted around the globe.³ Amazon has disclosed how much plastic it uses to ship orders but does not disclose how much plastic packaging it uses overall. The Company markets more than 100 brands of consumer goods, food, and beverages, many of which are packaged in plastic. Its Whole Foods subsidiary and Happy Belly brand sell numerous goods in flexible multi-layer packaging that cannot be routinely recycled. The Company is also notably absent from participating in the largest pre-competitive corporate initiative to address plastic pollution, the New Plastics Economy Global Commitment. Competitors, including Walmart and Target, have adopted goals to make plastic packaging recyclable, reusable, or compostable by 2025, while Amazon has not."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We seek to increase recycling rates for Amazon packaging and strive to enable curbside recyclability where available. We also continue to take steps to reduce single-use plastics in our outbound packaging. In 2022, the total metric tons of single-use plastic we used across our global operations network to ship orders to customers decreased by 11.6% from 2021. This decrease also contributed to the 17.1% decrease in average plastic packaging weight per shipment in 2022 across our global operations network, building on the over 7% reduction achieved in 2021. Since 2020, we have avoided the use of 37,150 metric tons of plastic packaging globally. While we are making progress, we are not satisfied. We have work to do to continue to reduce packaging, particularly plastic packaging that is harder to recycle, and we are undertaking a range of initiatives to do so. In cases where we cannot eliminate the packaging materials altogether, we are looking into replacing plastics with existing alternative material options that are more readily recyclable today, such as paper-based packaging. For example, during 2022, we expanded recyclable paper padded bag use across the U.S. and Canada, replacing 99% of harder-to-recycle padded bags that contain both plastic and paper. During 2023, in the U.S., we announced our first automated U.S. fulfillment center to fully eliminate single-use plastic delivery packaging. Our engineers reimaged machinery that was previously using plastic, and rebuilt the machines to use a new type of more durable, weather-resistant paper with heat sealing technology-in addition to inventing new machines with improved made-to-fit technology. At this fulfillment center, we also transitioned from plastic air pillows to paper filler made from 100% recycled content."

PIRC analysis: Reporting on sustainability issues is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing shareholders of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company, but also as a means of ensuring that the management and board of a company gives due consideration to these issues. The company indicates that it already has initiatives in this area. However, such reporting takes the form of estimates of measures such as percentage of packaging worldwide which was recyclable, compostable or biodegradable, or percentage of waste which was diverted from landfill. However, company's reporting seems to present no better information on how much actually is recycled, or what goals there are for achieving either 50% recycling or more. For this reason the report requested would appear to be necessary to assess where the Company has made mistakes and how it can remedy those.

12. Shareholder Resolution: Additional Reporting on Freedom of Association

Proponent's argument: Shareholder Association for Research & Education request the Board of Directors to commission an independent, third-party assessment of Amazon's adherence to its stated commitment to workers' freedom of association and collective bargaining rights as outlined in Amazon's Global Human Rights Principles, which explicitly reference the Core Conventions of the International Labour Organization and the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work. "For years, Amazon has faced global negative media coverage accusing the company of interfering with workers' exercise of their rights through anti-unionization tactics, including allegations of intimidation, retaliation and surveillance. US regulators and courts have ruled repeatedly that Amazon violated labor laws and have ordered remedies, including rerun union elections, reinstatement of terminated workers, and cease and desist orders to stop discharging workers in retaliation for union organizing. In France, Amazon refused to engage with unions representing warehouse employees concerning health and safety measures until ordered by both the Court of Nanterre and the Court of Appeal of Versailles. In Poland, Amazon reprimanded a union member for recruiting at her workplace, only to have that reprimand overturned by the Regional Court, which admonished the company not to treat unions as a "necessary evil" but as partners. In Germany, Amazon workers have struck repeatedly over a decade, as the company refuses to engage in collective bargaining."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Amazon employees are the foundation of our success as a company, and we are committed to respecting the fundamental human rights and the dignity of workers everywhere we operate around the world. When the lead proponent of this proposal submitted a similar shareholder proposal to Amazon in connection with our 2022 Annual Meeting, we prepared and published the report requested by that proposal.⁷³ Contrary to the assertion in this proposal's supporting statement, we believe the report explains how Amazon's current human rights policies and practices align with and are designed to ensure respect for fundamental rights of freedom of association and collective bargaining. After we issued the report requested in the proponent's proposal in 2022, the proponent declined to withdraw the proposal and requested information beyond what was requested under the proposal. [...] Consistent with our policies, we believe in and promote informed employee decision-making, open communication, and freedom of expression as an integral part of our employees' freedom of association. This includes sharing information on unionization in different ways, such as through small meetings on paid company time or by being available for questions and conversations as individuals want."

PIRC analysis: The proponent asks for a report on the risks associated with potential and actual risks from not respecting its employees' freedom of association. Such risks can have significant reputational and financial consequences for a company and it is in the best interests of shareholders to be informed of the company's exposure to and management of such risks. While the company indicates that it is committed to respecting the freedom to unionise by its employees throughout its plants and operations and reports some internal initiatives for this purpose, but it does not disclose the data underlying unionisation among its labour force. Ensuring that workers are actually free to unionise, free from retaliation as well as collecting the corresponding data are considered to be due diligence, in order to uphold company's policies on labour rights and minimise corresponding risks. As such, a vote for the resolution is recommended.

13. Shareholder Resolution: Disclosure of all Material Scope 3 GHG Emissions

Proponent's argument: Green Century Capital Management and Longview Largecap 500 Index Fund request that Amazon disclose all material Scope 3 greenhouse gas emissions. "For most retailers, Scope 3 product-related value chain activities are the largest source of emissions. Product-related value chain emissions include "all the emissions generated to make the products that retailers sell (upstream emissions) and the emissions that customers create by using and ultimately disposing of the products that they purchase (downstream emissions)." Because they constitute a significant portion of retailers' total emissions, meaningful efforts by retailers to reduce their contribution to systemic climate risk must address these product-related emissions. Amazon does not meet this standard. It discloses product-related value chain GHG emissions only for its private label (i.e., Amazon-branded) products. However, Amazon states that "private brands sales represent only about 1% of our total sales." Amazon therefore fails to disclose upstream and downstream emissions associated with 99% of its direct product sales. [...] By disclosing all material Scope 3 value chain emissions, Amazon can prepare for climate regulation, address systemic climate risk, insulate itself from potential reputational harm, increase the legitimacy of its climate targets, and position itself to maximize benefits from climate-related opportunities."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We follow guidance from the GHG Protocol Corporate Standard in calculating our greenhouse gas emissions (including Scope 3 emissions), and these are assured by independent third parties. Consistent with the GHG Protocol Corporate Standard, we focus on accounting for and reporting those activities that are relevant to our business and goals, and for which we are able to obtain reliable information. For example, many products purchased by customers are sold by third-party selling partners who control their own carbon emissions accounting. For those products, we account for the emissions generated by their transportation to customers when it is performed or paid for by Amazon.[...] In 2019, we co-founded The Climate Pledge-a goal to reach net-zero carbon emissions across our operations by 2040, 10 years ahead of the Paris Agreement. The path to decarbonization remains challenging, and as with many long-term goals, some of what we do today may not see carbon savings until many years later. This is especially true for a business of Amazon's size and broad scope; however, we will continue to invest, innovate, and focus on our progress towards our 2040 goal. In 2022, our absolute carbon emissions decreased by 0.4%. We achieved this in large part by improving efficiency across our business and continuing our investment in renewable energy. In addition, our carbon intensity decreased by 7% from 2021 to 2022, and by 24% since 2019. Over the last four years, our business has consistently become less carbon intensive, which further shows we are decoupling emissions growth from our growth as a business."

PIRC analysis: Scope 3 emissions (all indirect emissions that occur in the value chain of the reporting company) can be indicators of exposure to climate risks, such as carbon and energy 'hot spots' in the supply chain or use of products. Although their reporting is not compulsory under the GHG Protocol, they can help companies identify opportunities to create greater efficiencies in their value chains. Quantifying and reporting these emissions is only the first step into building a strategy with targets to reduce Scope 3 emissions. This will allow the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain emissions more proactively, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues deriving from this climate-related approach.

14. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Customer Use of Certain Technologies

Proponent's argument: John Harrington requests the Board of Directors commission an independent study of Rekognition and report to shareholders regarding: - The extent to which such technology may endanger, threaten or violate privacy and/or civil rights, and unfairly or disproportionately target or surveil people of color, immigrants and activists in the United States; - The extent to which such technologies may be marketed and sold to authoritarian or repressive governments, including those identified by the United States Department of State Country Reports on Human Rights Practices; - The potential loss of good will and other financial risks associated with these human rights issues. "Amazon markets and sells facial recognition ("Rekognition") to government that may pose significant financial risks due to privacy and human rights implications; Human and civil rights organizations are concerned facial surveillance technology may violate civil rights by unfairly and disproportionately targeting and surveilling people of color, immigrants and civil society organizations; Nearly 70 organizations asked Amazon to stop selling Rekognition, citing its role enabling "government surveillance infrastructure"; The ACLU found Rekognition incorrectly identified 28 Congressional members as having been arrested for a crime, and falsely matched 1 in 5 California lawmakers. Research shows Rekognition is worse at identifying black women than white men and misgenders nonbinary people. Reports indicate restricting facial recognition is a rising trend: - Multiple cities and states have banned government facial technology. -

In 2022, the Facial Recognition Ban on Body Cameras Act was reintroduced in Congress. - UN High Commissioner for Human Rights urged a moratorium on Artificial Intelligence (AI) until adequate safeguards exist, calling for a ban on AI inconsistent with international human rights law. "

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "While we have been working to constantly enhance our AI/ML technology, including for Amazon Rekognition, and have avoided or mitigated the risks and concerns posited in this proposal, for the sixth year in a row this proposal continues to rely on the same outdated assertions and mischaracterizations. For example, this proposal continues to mischaracterize Amazon Rekognition as a surveillance program. In fact, Amazon Rekognition does not collect images for users to perform searches on and does not provide any photos or data for users to search or compare images against. Instead, the service can be used to help analyze or detect objects, people, text, scenes, and activities in images and videos, as well as to detect inappropriate content, fraudulent users, or bots. In addition, AWS provides a website and e-mail address where any person can report suspected abuse, and AWS employs trained staff that review every report that is received. In the more than seven years AWS has been offering Amazon Rekognition, AWS has never received a single verified report of Amazon Rekognition being used in the harmful manner posited in the proposal. "

PIRC analysis: The company's provision of facial recognition products linked to potential human rights violations may expose it to legal, financial, and reputational risks. Concerns over new facial recognition tools have linked these products to racial bias and risks to privacy and human rights. The proposal does not request an outright ban on sales of these products either to the government or to governments representing repressive regimes; more reasonably, it suggests the Company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of violating human rights and civil liberties represented by its product being used by any customer, and the extent to which said product can be sold to repressive governments. While the company's response indicates that some work has been done in this area, more could be done. As such the request for the assessment appears reasonable.

15. Shareholder Resolution: Adopt a Policy for Director Transparency

Proponent's argument National Legal and Policy Center request the Board adopt as policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary, to require director nominees to furnish the Company, in sufficient time before publication of the annual proxy statement, information about their political and charitable giving. The information would be most valuable if it contained: • a list of his or her donations to federal and state political candidates, and to political action committees, in amounts that exceed $999 per year, for the preceding 10 years; • a list of his or her donations to nonprofit (under all IRS categories) and charitable organizations, in amounts that exceed $1,999 per year, for the preceding five years. "Amazon.com, Inc. [...] donated at least $10 million⁶ to groups⁷ that support lenient criminal justice policies following the death of George Floyd, policies that have destroyed many U.S. inner cities. Despite warnings, the Company's executive chair remained intransigent and tone-deaf.⁸ Unsurprisingly, the Company has now suffered a crime epidemic in its home city of Seattle.⁹ Corporate underperformance can be avoided if directors exercise greater risk oversight objectively. "Amazon's Board of Directors is responsible for the control and direction of the company,"¹⁰ but shareholders are uninformed about members' ideological and political views. Greater transparency is needed to allow shareholders to know whether our Board suffers partisan capture and therefore the group-think and ideological blinders that have cost some companies dearly in recent years.

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The proposal is based on the false premise that individual director nominees' personal charitable and political giving reflects how the Board manages and oversees the Company. Under Delaware corporate law, our Board members have fiduciary duties of care and loyalty to our shareholders and must act in our shareholders' best interest, including in the context of the Board's actions and decisions around director nominations. The duty of care requires informed, deliberative decision-making based on the material information reasonably available. The duty of loyalty requires acting on a disinterested and independent basis, in good faith, with an honest belief that the action is in the best interest of shareholders. Our Board represents the long-term interests of our shareholders consistent with these principles."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding directors' donations to charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology:

the fact that a director provides donations to a variety of charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be equally acceptable.

16. Shareholder Resolution: Board Committee to Oversee Artificial Intelligence

Proponent's argument: AFL-CIO Equity Index Funds, represented by Segal Marco Advisors request that the Board of Directors of Amazon.com, Inc. (the 'Company') charter a new committee of independent directors on Artificial Intelligence ('AI') to address human rights risks associated with the development and deployment of AI systems. 'Military and police applications of AI technology can also raise human rights concerns. In 2021, our Company reportedly took over a Department of Defense contract for an AI system to analyze military drone footage after Google dropped the project due to protests by Google employees. AI-driven misinformation and disinformation can also undermine democracy and distort election outcomes. For example, our Company's Alexa voice assistant was reported to have falsely claimed that the 2020 U.S. presidential election was stolen. And in the 2024 presidential primary election, Republican candidates have used AI generated deep fake images to attack each other. While we appreciate the steps that our Company has taken to establish ethical guidelines for the responsible use of AI, we believe that appointing a committee of independent directors will increase the Board of Directors' oversight of AI-related human rights risks. In our view, appointing a dedicated AI committee will enhance accountability to shareholders by clearly identifying which directors are responsible for AI-related human rights risks.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'The full Board has overall responsibility for risk oversight. The Board reviews our AI technologies as part of its continuous review of various aspects of our business, including related risks and strategies for addressing them. In addition, the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee charter specifically gives it responsibility for overseeing and monitoring the Company's policies and initiatives relating to corporate social responsibility, including human rights and ethical business practices, and risks related to the Company's operations and engagement with customers, suppliers, and communities. In this capacity, the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee, which is comprised of directors with experience in emerging technologies and public policy, oversees and reviews human rights aspects of Amazon's technologies, products, and services. These reviews focus on the actual operation and use of Amazon technologies, potential concerns and misuse that could arise from these technologies, and our actions to resolve or mitigate those risks and concerns.' [14:14] Robert Humphries

PIRC analysis: Ethical management of Artificial Intelligence (AI) is increasingly seen as a material issue in society. Several studies link the use of AI for policing purposes to negatively impact racial equity, for example. Issues resulting from ineffective management of AI-related risks can lead to reputational, compliance and value creation risks, but issues tied to technological development are not solely or even mainly related to risk, but also to opportunity. As such, it is supported that the company should take actions to ready itself for technological change by appointing directors with specific knowledge of the issue and hold regular discussions within a board committee regarding AI as part of the company strategy and oversight.

17. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Warehouse Working Conditions

Proponent's argument: Thomas Dadashi Tazehozhi, represented by Tulipshare Capital LLC request that the Board commission an independent audit and report of the working conditions and treatment that Amazon warehouse workers face, including the impact of its policies, management, performance metrics, and targets. "Amazon workers are closely monitored for their work productivity, with employees alleging that the pressure to meet quotas under threat of termination can lead to injury and burnout. New laws in California and New York target Amazon's use of productivity quotas that can prevent workers from complying with safety guidelines or recovering from strenuous activity, leaving them at high risk of injury and illness. Workers acknowledge Amazon instructs them on safety, but they have to break safety rules to keep up with their mandated quotas and pace of work out of fear of losing their jobs. Numerous federal- and state-level investigations found the high level of injury risk in Amazon's operations violated the law, citing Amazon for willful misconduct, and alleging Amazon is "knowingly putting workers at risk" across multiple warehouses, an allegation so severe that only 0.4 percent of citations in the regulator's 50-year history have been classified as willful."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "In addition to measuring our safety performance using the metrics discussed above, we identify and assess leading indicators, which are proactive metrics used as early predictors of safety performance. They help safety professionals and operations leaders identify potential risks that might cause incidents or injuries before they occur. By examining leading indicators and addressing potential hazards proactively, we are able to create a safer environment for our employees, partners, and communities. Leading indicators at Amazon include data from inspections, assessments, and audits, as well as data from employee and leader surveys, one-to-one conversations, focus groups, and observations of actual on-site activities provided by our employees. For example, in 2023, we conducted almost 6.3 million inspections, a 152% increase from the 2.5 million inspections conducted in 2020, and we audited 240 sites across Amazon. As another example, Dragonfly is a tool-available on employees' devices-that lets them easily share safety concerns and suggestions. Their site managers are immediately informed so they can take appropriate action. In 2023 alone, we successfully actioned over 200,000 Dragonfly observations to help make our sites safer. Amazon employees can also join Associate Safety Committees, which meet monthly with management to share safety ideas and discuss trends."

PIRC Analysis

Ensuring fair and safe working conditions can improve employee morale and productivity. In addition, companies with strong labor practices enhance the company's reputation and brand value, as well as the power to attract talents and retain them in the long term. The company outlines the global strategy and commitment to support communities and employees, but it does not appear to clarify the proponents' issues or bring a case as of why such report would be counter-productive. The resolution is not unduly prescriptive and it is considered beneficial for management and shareholders to look at data from a local-global perspective, allowing to act on local potential flaws within the company's global strategy. Support recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

ABRDN UK SMALLER COMPANIES GROWTH TRUST PLC EGM - 03-06-2024

1. Approve the Renewal of share buyback authority

Introduction & Background: At the Company's annual general meeting on 23 November 2023 (the 2023 AGM) Shareholders gave authority to the Directors to buyback a total of 12,474,394 ordinary shares of 25 pence in the capital of the Company (Ordinary Shares) representing 14.99 per cent. of the then issued share capital. As at 2 May 2024, the Company has bought back 8,384,700 Ordinary Shares and the authority granted at the 2023 AGM has been substantially utilised and the Directors have concluded that the remaining capacity would be fully utilised before the Company's next annual general meeting (the 2024 AGM), which is expected to be held in November 2024 if the Company's purchases of its own shares were to continue at the same rate as they have since the 2023 AGM. The Directors therefore wish to seek approval for a renewal of this authority.

Rationale: The Directors operate an active discount management mechanism which aims to deliver a maximum discount of the share price to the cum-income net asset value of 8% under normal market conditions (the discount). In pursuit of this objective, the Directors closely monitor the level of the discount and buyback Ordinary Shares in the market when they believe it is in the best interests of the Shareholders as a whole to do so. Market conditions over the last two years have been particularly harsh and the market has witnessed discounts widening across the industry, making it extremely difficult for any such mechanism to be successful over an extended period. The Board remains committed to its stated aim, which it will continue to strive to achieve through its ongoing buyback programme. If the renewed buyback authority is granted this will allow the Company to continue to operate its discount management mechanism which the Directors believe would be in the best interests of the Company and its Shareholders. Without such approval the Directors may not have sufficient authority to continue to buyback Ordinary Shares. In such circumstances it might be expected that the discount would widen through a fall in the share price relative to the underlying net asset value, which is to the detriment of all existing Shareholders.

Recommendation: Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

Furthermore, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ADB. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is less than three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Use of AI

Proponent's argument: he New York City Employees' Retirement System request that Warner Bros. Discovery, Inc. (the 'Company') prepare and publicly disclose on the Company's website a transparency report that explains the Company's use of Artificial Intelligence ('AI') in its business operations and the Board's role in overseeing AI usage, and sets forth any ethical guidelines that the company has adopted regarding its use of AI. 'Transparency regarding the Company's use of AI, and any ethical guidelines governing that use, will strengthen the Company. Transparency would address the public's growing concerns and distrust about the indiscriminate use of AI, strengthening the Company's position and reputation as a responsible, trustworthy, and sustainable leader in its industry. With a transparency report, the Company could establish that it uses AI in a safe, responsible, and ethical manner that complements the work of its employees and values the public. The White House Office of Science and Technology Policy has developed ethical guidelines to help guide the design, use, and deployment of AI. These five principles for an AI Bill of Rights are 1) safe and effective systems, 2) algorithmic discrimination protections, 3) data privacy, 4) notice and explanation, and 5) human alternatives, consideration, and fallback. [...] If the Company does not already have ethical guidelines for the use of AI, the adoption of ethical guidelines for the use of AI may improve the Company's performance by avoiding costly labor disruptions and lawsuits related to the improper use of AI. The entertainment industry writer and performer strikes, sparked in part by AI concerns, and lawsuits related to the use of copyrighted works by AI engines have been prominent new stories throughout 2023 and may prove costly for companies that make use of AI. [...] AI systems should not be trained on copyrighted works, or the voices, likenesses and performances of professional performers, without transparency, consent and compensation to creators and rights holders. AI should also not be used to create literary material, to replace or supplant the creative work of professional writers.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'At WBD, we believe Generative AI may present significant opportunities, but also poses serious risks, particularly with respect to security, intellectual property, privacy, employment, and confidentiality. This is why we are committed to learning more about Generative AI, staying abreast of regulatory developments, properly vetting potential use cases, and making decisions about the use of Generative AI in our business in a thoughtful, responsible, ethical, and legally compliant manner. As with all significant operational decisions that impact our business and employees, the WBD Board will exercise oversight with respect to Generative AI. How the Board exercises this oversight and whether and to what extent oversight is delegated to a specific Board committee will be determined, in part, by regulatory developments around Generative AI and the uses of Generative AI that management ultimately determines to adopt. [...] The Company and the Board recognize the need to be deliberate and thoughtful in the deployment of artificial intelligence throughout our business, including carefully weighing the consequences and impacts on our stakeholders, including employees. The social policy concerns raised by the proposal such as potential discrimination or bias in employment decisions, mass layoffs due to job automation, facility closures, the misuse and disclosure of private data, and the creation of 'deep fake' media content that may result in the dissemination of false information are not new and the Company has already implemented guidelines and policies to address these issues. The Board and its committees also periodically review and update these guidelines and policies to ensure they appropriately meet the evolving needs of our business.'

PIRC analysis: An explicit AI transparency report offers several key benefits as opposed to ad hoc agreements or policies. It builds trust with users and stakeholders by clarifying how AI is utilized in content creation and recommendation, including copyright infringements, and fostering confidence in fair and ethical practices. It helps identify and mitigate biases in the creation and dissemination of content, ensuring content recommendations are unbiased and inclusive. It addresses ethical concerns by enabling stakeholders to assess alignment with content policies and societal values. 6. Shareholder Resolution: Right to Call Special Meetings

Proponent's argument: Kenneth Steiner asked the board to take the steps necessary to amend the appropriate company governing documents to give the owners of a combined 10% of the outstanding common stock the power to call a special shareholder meeting (or the lowest percentage according to state law) regardless of length of stock ownership also in accordance with state law. ' Calling for a special shareholder meeting is hardly ever used by shareholders but the main point of the right to call for a special shareholder meeting is that it gives shareholders at least significant standing to engage effectively with management. Management will have an incentive to genuinely engage with shareholders instead of stonewalling if shareholders have a realistic Plan B option of calling a special shareholder meeting. Often the management of a company will claim that shareholders have multiple means to communicate with management - but in most cases these are low impact means that are as effective as mailing a post card to the CEO. A reasonable shareholder right to call a special shareholder meeting is an important step for effective shareholder engagement with management. Since a special shareholder meeting can be called to replace a director, adoption of this proposal could foster better performance by our directors.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'As of April 2024, only approximately 18% of U.S. S&P 500 companies provided stockholders with a right to call special meetings with an ownership threshold of 10% of the outstanding capital stock, as requested in the proposal. The Company monitors trends in corporate governance and compares and evaluates new developments against WBD's current practices. Given our present capital structure and stockholder base, a special meeting right with this low 10% threshold could allow certain minority stockholders, whose views do not reflect those of the broader stockholder base, to have an outsized voice relative to other stockholders. Accordingly, the Board believes that the 10% threshold requested by the proposal is inconsistent with market practice.'

PIRC analysis: The right to call a special shareholder meeting provides shareholders with a way of communicating with the Board and debating and voting on issues with the rest of shareholders which in itself enhances shareholders' rights. The 10% threshold recommended by the Proponent is considered acceptable. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Corporate Financial Sustainability

Proponent's argument National Center for Public Policy Research request that the Board of Directors create a board corporate sustainability committee to oversee and review the impact of the Company's policy positions and advocacy on matters relating to the Company's financial sustainability. "Reigning in the network's liberal bias by removing polarizing hosts like Brian Stelter, John Harwood, and Don Lemon is an important step, but it will do nothing to regain trust in the network if it continues with the same biased reporting. The Company's movie business has also suffered. It cancelled its $70+ million "Batgirl" film because its "woke" version was "irredeemable," ranking as one of the most expensive movie cancellations ever. Its recent movie "The Flash" made history for DC after the film suffered the biggest second-weekend box office drop domestically after the movie plummeted 72.5% from its opening weekend. The movie featuring the erratic Ezra Miller earned just $15.3 million in the U.S. in its second weekend out after a $55 million opening weekend at the box office. Ezra Miller, who goes by the pronoun they/them, has been accused of grooming, preying on minors, choking fans and engaging in violence, yet nonetheless starred in a film that the Company brought to market, rather than cutting its losses and shelving the film, thereby also avoiding further reputational destruction. The Company's privileging of executive political/social preferences over sound business judgment in its television and film productions has cost shareholders billions already."

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The proposal is inherently vague and misleading as it fails to define several key terms, rendering it likely impossible for stockholders and the Company to fully understand the proposal's true intent and purpose. The proposal focuses on "matters relating to the Company's financial sustainability"- a term which could be interpreted in a number of ways, to cover matters ranging from our environmental sustainability efforts to our financial performance and strategy. The proposal also asks the Company to form a "board corporate sustainability committee" which, too, is vague and can be misinterpreted to encompass Board oversight over a wide range of distinct and unrelated matters. The proposal adds a further layer of confusion by asking the Board to "oversee and review the impact of the Company's policy positions and advocacy" on the matters referenced in the proposal, a task that first requires clarity as to exactly the kinds of matters or issues the proposal relates to. And adding further to the confusion is the proposal's supporting statement which chastises the Company for having "embraced a partisan lineup of hosts that parroted liberal talking points" and calls on the Company to "reign[sic] in the network's liberal bias." Such supporting statement, which focuses attention on the Company's programming, only further complicates the purpose and intent of the proposal. Even the proposal's use of the term "sustainability", which is widely used in business to refer to a company's strategy and actions to reduce adverse environmental and social impacts, is inherently misleading, as it attempts to confuse and mislead stockholders into believing the proposal is focused on environmental or social sustainability. In short, the proposal has been confusingly drafted with the intent of appealing to a wide range of stockholder interests, rather than to address any particular issue."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. Increased disclosure that links charitable spending with Financial Sustainability would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. Nevertheless, the identification of donations to certain charities as the sole or at least a direct responsible for a company's stock price is disputable. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology with the intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company may donate. On the contrary, the fact that the company provides donations to different charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all charities or all viewpoints should be equally acceptable.

GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY AGM - 04-06-20243. *Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: AEB. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Report on the Use of Child Labor in Connection with the Company's EV Supply Chain

Proponent's argument: New Breeze request that, beginning in 2025, General Motors Company ("GM") report annually to shareholders on the extent to which its electric vehicle ("EV") supply chain may involve, rely, or depend on child labor outside the United States. The report should be done at reasonable cost and omit proprietary and/or confidential business information. Supporting Statement: Investors are concerned that potential and actual use of child labor in GM's supply chain poses significant financial, reputational, and legal risks to the company and to investors. Investors seek reliable data to evaluate those risks. [...] As much as 70% of cobalt from the DRC is connected with child labor. And virtually all Cobalt from the DRC is tainted by various degrees of abuse including slavery, child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, hazardous and toxic working conditions, meager wages, and incalculable environmental harm. Monitoring the situation is difficult due to "aggressive security forces, intense surveillance, the remoteness of many mining areas, distrust of outsiders, and the sheer scale of hundreds of thousands of people engaged in the feverish excavation of cobalt in medieval conditions". The use of child labor or forced labor in a company's supply chain creates a risk of potentially costly lawsuits and government investigations. GM provides insufficient information on the extent to which its supply chain involves or depends on the direct or indirect exploitation of child labor and other human-rights violations outside the United States. As a result, investors are unable to evaluate whether the company is adequately addressing these material risks."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We continuously monitor our supply chain for compliance with laws, our Supplier Code of Conduct, and our policies, including through our annual supplier survey, in which we ask them to confirm that they comply with and cascade GM's Supplier Code of Conduct or an equivalent code of conduct throughout their own supply chains. If we become aware of allegations of violations of child labor laws, our agreements, our Supplier Code of Conduct, or our policies, we take appropriate action to review and substantiate the allegations. In some cases, we elect to leverage third-party audits for high-risk suppliers or, where we have identified a potential concern, we may also request sub-tier audits. GM representatives also visit supplier sites from time to time to reinforce the seriousness of these issues and to utilize our relationship leverage to prompt timely resolution of any concerns. We hold all suppliers to our high standards and, where circumstances warrant, we are prepared to terminate supplier relationships. GM also requires employees who are frequently at supplier facilities to undertake annual training about identifying child and forced labor and provides external training to improve supplier operations and practices in this area. "

PIRC analysis: Potential and actual child labour risks can have significant reputational and financial consequences for a company and it is in the best interests of shareholders to be informed of the Company's exposure to and management of such risks. The company indicates that it is committed to not using forced or child labour in operations or supply chain and has disclosed some initial data and targets and as such, it is difficult to see why the company finds this proposal counter-productive. Ensuring that suppliers are not employing child labour is considered to be due diligence, in order to uphold company's policies on human rights and minimize corresponding risks. Indeed, this report would allow a better perspective on where are potential flaws, in order for the company to be sure that there is no discrepancy between its own policy and its implementation.

It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

5. Shareholder Resolution: To Eliminate EV Targets from Incentive Compensation Programs

Proponent's argument: The National Legal and Policy Center request the Executive Compensation Committee of the Board of Directors to revisit its incentive guidelines for executive pay, to emphasize legitimate fiduciary goals, and to consider eliminating EV production metric goals from compensation inducements. "Climate models used to predict future events "may be overly sensitive to carbon dioxide increases and therefore project future warming that is unrealistically high." In addition, EVs are plagued by economic, logistical, and ethical downsides, including: Pre-tax operating profit for the EV division at General Motors Company ("GM" or "Company") may not be positive until 2025. The division relies on politically controversial EV subsidies that may be repealed under a new U.S. government in 2025. According to an open letter to President Biden signed by almost 4,000 auto dealers, most consumers don't want EVs. Electric vehicle batteries require large quantities of rare-earth elements, which are overwhelmingly owned, mined, and processed by China. This presents a risk for U.S. companies that could become political targets of the Chinese Communist Party. Battery supply chains are tainted by forced labor. Supporting Statement: Considering the evidence that EVs are unnecessary, unprofitable, and unethical, GM's executive pay incentives are an inefficient deployment of company resources[...] . These pay incentives reduce management's strategic flexibility. We believe GM's executives should focus on maximizing financial performance by pleasing customers. GM's competitors substantially invest to meet demand for non-electric vehicles.¹⁸ The Company cannot afford to be left behind because of misguided executive pay incentives. "

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The production and profitable sale of EVs is critical to our long-term strategy to drive shareholder value, and we believe it is essential to align management and shareholder interests through our compensation plans as we continue our transition to an all-electric future. [...] As one of the four pillars of our strategy, we remain committed to growing our EV business profitably. Based on current expectations for EV demand and production growth, strong interest in our vehicles, lower commodity prices, and other factors, we expect our U.S. EV portfolio will become variable profit positive in the second half of this year, and we continue to target low- to mid-single digit EBIT-adjusted margins on our EV portfolio by 2025. However, if demand conditions change, we'll take advantage of our manufacturing flexibility in Spring Hill and Ramos Arizpe to build more ICE models and fewer EVs, and we can adjust the mix between different EV products at Factory ZERO. In addition, while we remain committed to an all-electric future, our interim plans include bringing our plug-in hybrid technology to select vehicles in North America. Ultimately, we will follow the customer and build to demand – always with the goal of driving strong shareholder returns.

PIRC analysis: Given the severity of the climate crisis, it is considered that companies should rely to every measure possible must be taken by investee companies to facilitate a net zero carbon transition. Electronic Vehicles are not a fits-all solution as adaptation to climate change and decarbonization require several actions in conjunction. However, they are part of the solution. If anything, performance management and executive remuneration should be redesigned to include more sustainability-related targets and not less, so that the company will align the pay of its executives with the company's pledge to reduce emissions and incentivize senior executives in line with its commitments. It will not only mitigate regulatory and reputational risk in this area, which can be detrimental to company financial performance, but also motivate executives to seek long term opportunities from the energy transition. Stripping away climate-related criteria from executive compensation would mean ignoring the potential long-term costs of climate change.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Report on the Company's Use of Deep-Sea Mined Minerals in its Production and Supply Chains

Proponent's argument: The Woodcock Foundation request that General Motors publicly disclose the Company's policies on the use of deep-sea mined minerals in its production and supply chains. "The scientific uncertainty and likely harms of DSM have caused civil society groups, governments, private organizations, and manufacturers to voice deep-seated concerns. Twenty-four governments have established bans, moratoriums, or precautionary pauses on DSM. DSM is also at odds with global goals to protect and restore nature, including the Kunming-Montreal Global Biodiversity Framework. Finally, the supply of deep-sea minerals is technologically and financially insecure, making it expensive and risky for automakers to incorporate deep-sea sourced minerals into supply chains. [...] Peers' commitment to a moratorium demonstrates the precautionary principle and the availability of more sustainable methods to obtain minerals. The BMW Group emphasizes that its "sustainability strategy is also relying more on resource-efficient closed-loop material cycles – with the aim of significantly increasing the percentage of secondary material in vehicles." Unlike its peers, General Motors (GM) has not supported a DSM moratorium or taken a public position on DSM, leaving shareholders concerned that the Company is not addressing the serious reputational, financial, and regulatory risks of DSM. By taking a public stance on DSM and deep-sea sourced minerals, GM can assure investors that it is addressing the risks of DSM and practicing responsible sourcing."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "GM believes more must be done to build sustainable EV and battery supply chains and increase our chances of success in an increasingly complex geopolitical environment. The continued growth in EV adoption has and will continue to drive significant demand for battery raw materials – and in light of consumer and regulatory pressure to make the EV transition happen as fast as possible, we believe it is important to conduct responsible due diligence on alternative value chains to determine if they are viable. Given the scientific uncertainty, to date, GM has not invested in deep-sea mineral extraction, and we do not currently use – or have plans to use – deep-sea minerals in our supply chain. However, we are following the efforts of respected third parties who are making science-based evaluations in an effort to establish criteria for if and how deep-sea minerals may be extracted sustainably and responsibly in the future. The Company engages regularly with relevant industry organizations and other stakeholders and will continue our deliberative cross-functional evaluation of all new technologies, including deep-sea mineral extraction."

PIRC analysis: The potential environmental consequences of deep-sea mining (DSM) include habitat destruction, biodiversity loss, and chemical pollution. The extraction process can disrupt fragile ecosystems on the ocean floor, leading to habitat destruction and biodiversity loss. Additionally, there are concerns about the potential release of harmful chemicals and heavy metals into the surrounding marine environment, impacting among other indigenous communities who rely on the ocean for their livelihoods and cultural practices and who could eventually be displaced. Workers involved in DSM operations may also face hazardous working conditions and limited access to labor rights such as collective bargaining and freedom of association. The proposal does not request an outright ban on the use of DSM, although company peers committed to a moratorium of DSM. Rather, it seeks transparency (with or without a third-party audit) of the policies on and associated risks from DSM throughout the value chain. The proposal is considered to be reasonable.

It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Sustainability Risk in the Company's Supply Chain

Proponent's argument: Amy Floyd requests the Company issue an annual report providing additional disclosure on sustainability risks within its supply chain and risk mitigation efforts. "General Motors (GM) issued low-carbon procurement targets for primary steel and aluminum of 10% by 2030. However, because demand for low-carbon steel and aluminum is surging, the Company may face competitive and reputational risks if it does not join broader initiatives aimed at securing additional supply. Competitors Volvo and Mercedes-Benz have taken steps to support sustainable steel supply by participating in ResponsibleSteel, a standard setting organization. Volvo and Polestar signed on to SteelZero, an initiative that builds demand for low-carbon steel in order to incentivize greater production. Further, Audi, BMW, and Mercedes-Benz participate in the Aluminum Stewardship Initiative, which promotes sustainable aluminum mining and production. [...] Although GM is a founding member of the Global Platform for Sustainable Natural Rubber, it has not disclosed comprehensive information on deforestation risk posed by rubber cultivation, nor on risk mitigation. The Company fails to provide similar disclosures for its leather and mineral supply chains. While GM reported some deforestation risk in 2021 to the internationally recognized reporting platform, CDP, it submitted virtually no information in 2022 and 2023. Without greater disclosure, investors may be under informed about climate and deforestation risks embedded in GM's supply chain or risk mitigation measures."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We know that our suppliers' commitment to responsible and sustainable operations is a critical component of our vision of zero crashes, zero emissions, and zero congestion. GM's cross-functional teams work directly with suppliers to integrate sustainability into all aspects of our supply chain. This includes our ESG Supplier Pledge, which invites our Tier 1 suppliers to embrace sustainability in a holistic manner, focusing on commitments related to environmental, social, and governance topics. As part of the Pledge, GM is asking its suppliers to commit to carbon neutrality for their Scope 1 and Scope 2 emissions relevant to products or services provided to GM, with a target of (i) 2035 for manufacturing suppliers that provide vehicle components and purchased equipment and (ii) 2038 for raw materials suppliers that provide raw materials or logistics. In addition, we have announced procurement commitments that are aligned with the goals of the First Movers Coalition with respect to concrete, steel, and aluminum."

PIRC analysis: Across the value chain, the company could be involved in use of terrestrial ecosystems, including native forests, desertification, land degradation, and biodiversity loss. Understanding environmental impacts from raw material sourcing helps manage risks to operations, reputation, and financial performance. Addressing risks supports long-term sustainability, enhances stakeholder trust, and creates shareholder value. Such a report enables informed decision-making and fosters transparency throughout the supply chain, benefiting shareholders and stakeholders alike. It will also allow the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain more proactively, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues, eventually aligning its operations with Sustainable Development Goals.

BH MACRO LTD AGM - 05-06-2024

2. Re-appoint KPMG as the Auditors

KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid during the year under review and 11.57% was paid on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. ALPHABET INC AGM - 07-06-2024

1d. Re-elect John L. Hennessy - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of more than nine years. In addition, Mr. Hennessy was previously the President of Stanford University until 2016, to which the Company paid $5.7 million in 2015 for scholarships, research and consulting services. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

3. Shareholder Resolution: Bylaw Amendment: Stockholder Approval of Director Compensation

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden asks that the Board shall not have any authority to fix the compensation of directors. The compensation of directors the corporation pays shall be fixed at $1 in a fiscal year; provided, however, the corporation may pay, grant, or award compensation greater than $1 in a fiscal year if such compensation has been (1) disclosed to stockholders in advance of the fiscal year in which the corporation will pay, grant, or award such compensation; (2) submitted to an approval vote of stockholders at an annual or special meeting of stockholders in advance of the fiscal year in which the corporation will pay, grant, or award such disclosed compensation; and (3) approved by a majority of stockholder votes present in person or represented by proxies and entitled to vote cast in favor of the disclosed annual compensation at an annual or special meeting of stockholders in advance of the fiscal year in which the corporation will pay, grant, or award such compensation, which majority shall include only stockholder votes of stockholders that are not directors of the corporation. "Stockholders want and need authority over how and how much Alphabet compensates directors. If stockholders approve compensation, then directors have the greatest incentive to work in the sole interest of stockholders. Currently, directors design and approve compensation with no approval from stockholders. Directors receive whatever compensation they desire. This bylaw amendment corrects this problem. The bylaw amendment provides for a stockholder vote on director compensation. Directors can continue to design and propose compensation structure and amount, including the mix and amount of cash and equity. Stockholders will have final approval over whether directors receive what directors propose. Stockholders will vote on director compensation as disclosed in the proxy statement for a stockholder meeting before the fiscal year in which directors receive that compensation. Stock owned by directors will not count in the vote, so the vote result represents the independent views of stockholders. "

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Section 141(h) of the Delaware General Corporation Law explicitly empowers directors to set their own compensation, and the vast majority of U.S. public companies (and our peer companies) give their boards this authority. Stockholder approval or ratification of director compensation in the manner contemplated by this proposal is not common practice. None of our peer companies have adopted an amendment to the bylaws like the one requested by the proposal, and we are not aware of any other similarly situated companies outside of our industry that have such a provision in their bylaws. We believe that implementing this atypical arrangement would put us at a competitive disadvantage to our peers, hindering our ability to attract and retain talented directors. It would also entail significant time, resources, and costs every year to execute, requiring either a special meeting of stockholders or additional steps to be built into our annual meeting process. "

PIRC analysis: The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability and fiduciary duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. In this sense, the proposal represents an opportunity to enhance transparency, accountability, and alignment of interests within the company, as well as to bring the company in line with remuneration practice overseas. By empowering shareholders to approve director compensation, the proposal promotes good corporate governance practices and reinforces the fiduciary duty of directors to act in the best interests of shareholders.

4. Shareholder Resolution: EEO Policy Risk Report

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that Alphabet Inc. issue a public report detailing the potential risks associated with omitting "viewpoint" and "ideology" from its written equal employment opportunity (EEO) policy. "Alphabet's lack of a company-wide best practice EEO policy sends mixed signals to company employees and prospective employees and calls into question the extent to which individuals are protected due to inconsistent state policies and the absence of federal protection for partisan activities. Approximately half of Americans live and work in a jurisdiction with no legal protections if their employer takes action against them for their political activities. Companies with inclusive policies are better able to recruit the most talented employees from a broad labor pool, resolve complaints internally to avoid costly litigation or reputational damage, and minimize employee turnover. Moreover, inclusive policies contribute to more efficient human capital management by eliminating the need to maintain different policies in different locations. There is ample evidence that individuals with conservative viewpoints may face discrimination at Alphabet. [...]Coupled with the fact that Alphabet has refused previous requests to increase the viewpoint diversity of its board, this type of behavior signals to employees that viewpoint discrimination is condoned if not encouraged at the highest levels. Presently shareholders are unable to evaluate how Alphabet prevents discrimination towards employees based on their ideology or viewpoint, mitigates employee concerns of potential discrimination, and ensures a respectful and supportive work atmosphere that bolsters employee performance. Without an inclusive EEO policy, Alphabet may be sacrificing competitive advantages relative to peers while simultaneously increasing company and shareholder exposure to reputational and financial risks.

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Google is an equal opportunity employer, where employment is based solely on a person's merit and qualifications directly related to professional competence. Our EEO Policy states, "Google does not discriminate against any employee or applicant" because of many enumerated categories, including "basis protected by law", and it is Google's policy to "comply with all applicable national, state and local laws pertaining to nondiscrimination and equal opportunity." This protection includes any state or local laws that provide protection with respect to political activities or affiliation. Beyond the enumerated categories in the EEO Policy, we have a Standards of Conduct Policy provision as part of our Policy on Harassment, Discrimination, Retaliation, Standards of Conduct, and Workplace Concerns (the Conduct Policy). The Conduct Policy states that all employees are held to the highest standards of ethics and conduct and prohibits failing to maintain basic standards of civility and not treating each other with dignity."

PIRC analysis: This resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the company's message internally and externally. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints, including those that some customers may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable. In addition, it's important to note that while promoting diverse perspectives is essential, explicitly tying viewpoint or ideology to the company's Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) policy may inadvertently introduce bias or hinder an inclusive environment. Therefore, the proposal's focus on ideological diversity within the EEO policy framework may indeed undermine the policy's very effectiveness.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Electromagnetic Radiation and Wireless Technologies Risks

Proponent's argument: Lendri Purcell requests that Goole issue an annual report, at a reasonable expense and excluding proprietary information, on the health effects and financial risks associated with electromagnetic radiation and wireless technologies, and compare its safety performance to the other wireless device developers, operators and manufacturers. "Prominent scientists declare the WHO's International Agency for Research on Cancer classification of radiofrequency radiation should be at least a probable, if not a proven human carcinogen. Insurers, including underwriters at Lloyd's of London, have expressly excluded from coverage indemnity for risks arising from exposure to wireless radiation. Mobile carriers are unable to obtain commercial insurance to cover liability risks arising from wireless radiation exposure. Insurers rank 5G and electromagnetic radiation as a "high" risk, comparing the hazard to lead and asbestos. Children are uniquely sensitive and absorb more wireless radiation deeper into their brains. Almost all U.S. teens have access to smartphones; 45% say they are "almost constantly" online. [...] Google instructs users to distance products from the body to avoid violating wireless limits. In the US, the American Academy of Pediatrics, California Department of Health, the California Department of Health, Maryland State Children's Environmental Health and Protection Advisory Council, New Jersey Education Association, New Hampshire State 5G Commission and Santa Clara Medical Association have released advisories to reduce wireless radiation."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our cellular devices meet all regulatory and safety requirements for countries where the products are sold. In the U.S. for example, the U.S. Specific Absorption Rate (or the measure of the amount of radio frequency energy absorbed by the body when using a mobile phone) limits are among the most stringent in the world at 1.6 Watts/kilogram¹ and are lower than the EU limits at 2.0 Watts/kilogram. Further, Google maintains a robust product compliance program regarding electromagnetic fields and safety, including policies and processes designed to ensure compliance with applicable laws and disclosure to users. Numerous scientific, health, and governmental organizations around the world have reviewed scientific research on radiofrequency fields (RF) exposure and health. These organizations have all independently reached similar conclusions regarding RF exposure and human health; that is, that long-term RF exposure below the current scientifically based exposure limits has not reliably or convincingly been established as causing any type of adverse health effects in humans, including cancer or other chronic health conditions. Health, scientific, and other agencies, like the World Health Organization (WHO) and U.S. and European regulatory agencies, draw evidence-based consensus conclusions from systematic reviews performed by multidisciplinary panels of scientists and physicians."

PIRC analysis: Numerous studies have investigated the potential health impacts of exposure to electromagnetic fields (EMFs) emitted by wireless devices such as cell phones, Wi-Fi routers, and smart meters, with the overall scientific consensus being that there is insufficient evidence to establish a causal relationship between EMF exposure from wireless technologies and adverse health effects in humans, a consensus that is informing guidelines for safe levels of exposure published by organizations such as the World Health Organization (WHO) and the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection (ICNIRP). Nevertheless, the proposal that the company issue an annual report on the health effects associated with electromagnetic radiation and wireless technologies, while also comparing its safety performance to other industry players, serves multiple purposes: it enhances transparency and accountability empowering shareholders to make informed decisions and assess the adequacy of the company's risk management practices, while comparing the company's safety performance to industry peers provides valuable insights into the effectiveness of the company's risk management protocols, highlighting areas for improvement and enhancing its competitive positioning within an effective management of stakeholders instances. Support is recommended.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Request for the Board to Adopt a Policy for Director Transparency

Proponent's argument National Legal and Policy Center request the Board adopt as policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary, to require each year that director nominees to furnish the Company, in sufficient time before publication of the annual proxy statement, information about their political and charitable giving. " Viewpoint disagreements have intensified, and businesses are caught in the middle. While shareholders should expect corporate engagement over matters that affect operations – like taxation and regulation – many companies get involved in contentious matters unrelated to their core businesses. Corporate support of potentially controversial stances, especially on social and cultural issues, can damage relationships with customers, employees, and investors, and present material risks to companies' reputation and sustainability. [...] Alphabet, Inc. [...] donated millions of dollars to groups that support lenient criminal justice policies that have destroyed many U.S. inner cities. The Company's efforts contributed to the widespread vilification of police officers and a rise in crime across the country. Corporate underperformance can be avoided if directors exercise greater risk oversight objectively. According to Alphabet's Investor Relations, "the fundamental responsibility of the directors is to exercise their business judgment to act in what they reasonably believe to be the best interests of Alphabet and its stockholders," but shareholders are uninformed about members' ideological and political views. Greater transparency is needed for shareholders to discern whether our Board suffers the partisan capture and therefore the group-think ideological blinders that have cost some companies in recent years."

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "To facilitate the thorough and detailed evaluation of each director nominee in light of the robust criteria and processes established by our Board, our director nominees are required to furnish to Alphabet extensive disclosures about themselves relating to each of the criteria and considerations established by our Board. For example, among many other categories of information requested from our directors, director nominees are required to provide to Alphabet information regarding their outside activities and commitments, including employment history, outside directorships, involvement with charitable or non-profit organizations, relationships with business partners, related party considerations, and other affiliations (political or otherwise). All of this information is collected through our director questionnaires, which are comprehensive and aligned with best practices. Our Governance Committee uses the information received by each director nominee, consulting with the company's legal team as appropriate, to ensure that each decision furthers the best interests of the company and our stockholders. "

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding directors' donations to charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that a director provides donations to a variety of charities, including those that some shareholders may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be equally acceptable.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Climate Risks to Retirement Plan Beneficiaries

Proponent's argument: As You Sow request Alphabet publish a report disclosing how the Company is protecting plan beneficiaries - especially those with a longer investment time horizon - from increased future portfolio risk created by present-day investments in high-carbon companies. "While our Company has taken actions to address its operational greenhouse gas emissions, it has not acted to meaningfully address the emissions generated by its retirement plan investments. The plan's "default" investment option - into which participants are automatically enrolled if they do not affirmatively select another option - is the Vanguard Target Retirement fund series. The funds in this series account for 65% of plan assets. These funds invest heavily in high-carbon companies and companies contributing to deforestation. Investments in high-carbon and deforestation-risk companies help fuel the climate crisis and make worst-case economic scenarios more likely. To effectively mitigate the climate crisis and keep temperature increases within manageable ranges, the world has a limited "carbon budget." Emissions today deplete that budget and, together with investments in new sources of emissions, "lock in" future temperature increases. High-carbon and deforestation-risk retirement plan investments contribute to systemic climate risk in beneficiaries' portfolios, endangering workers' life savings. These investments are especially perverse when made automatically on behalf of younger workers with long investment time horizons."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The U.S. Department of Labor's investment duties regulation mandates that an ERISA retirement plan fiduciary select investment options, including the default investment option, based on factors the fiduciary "reasonably determines are relevant to a risk and return analysis." This may include the economic, risk and return effects of climate change or carbon-emissions on a particular investment. However, the law provides that a fiduciary may not sacrifice the interest of Plan participants' retirement income or other financial benefits by compromising investment returns or taking on additional investment risks to promote unrelated benefit or goals. The weight given to a risk factor should be based on the facts and a reasonable assessment of its impact on risk and return. In discharging this fiduciary duty, the investment committee thoughtfully constructs, and closely and regularly monitors, investment options across a variety of different asset classes and investment styles, carefully weighing the potential risks, rewards, and goals. We believe this proposal, and the report it suggests, focuses too narrowly on climate risks and carbon emissions. By overlooking the legally-mandated risk and return evaluation of the Plan, the proposal risks putting undue pressure on the investment committee to make changes that are imprudent or not in the best interests of Plan participants."

PIRC analysis: It is considered that shareholders should be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change as part of the investment strategy of the company's retirement plan is not considered to be in the best interests of its employees. Fossil fuels financing is risky, with records of several human rights and environmental violations and returns that can pay out only years after the initial expensive investment. Although some case studies show that pension funds are getting increasingly involved in the energy transition, most of the financial system as a whole is still oriented mainly towards financing the linear economy when not directly fossil fuel enterprises. Nevertheless, retail investors such as the beneficiaries from the company's retirement plan are increasingly reported to feel that brands have a responsibility to take care of the planet, and UN's Business and Sustainable Development Commission issued a forecast where sustainability is mentioned as to be worth at least USD 12 trillion a year by 2030 to businesses. As such, financing the energy transition could be indeed an opportunity especially for pension funds, where the size of a greener economy (directly related to the availability of financing for those projects) and the long term would meet. 8. Shareholder Resolution: Lobbying Report

Proponent's argument: United Church Funds request the preparation of a report, updated annually, disclosing: 1. Company policy and procedures governing lobbying, both direct and indirect, and grassroots lobbying communications. 2. Payments by Alphabet used for (a) direct or indirect lobbying or (b) grassroots lobbying communications, in each case including the amount of the payment and the recipient. "Full disclosure of Alphabet's lobbying activities and expenditures is needed to assess whether its lobbying is consistent with Alphabet's expressed goals and stockholders' best interests. Alphabet spent $119,029,000 on federal lobbying from 2015 – 2022. This does not include state lobbying. Alphabet lobbied in at least 39 states in 2022. Alphabet also lobbies abroad, "being accused of shady lobbying" and spending between €5,500,000 – 5,999,999 on lobbying in Europe for 2022. [...] Alphabet belongs to the Chamber of Commerce and Business Roundtable, which have spent over $2.2 billion on lobbying since 1998, supports SWGs that lobby like National Taxpayers Union and Taxpayers Protection Alliance, and funds controversial nonprofits like the Competitive Enterprise Institute (CEI), Federalist Society and Independent Women's Forum, which has drawn scrutiny for "using anti-trans scaremongering" to oppose the Equal Rights Amendment. Alphabet's lack of disclosure presents reputational risks when its lobbying contradicts company public positions or hides payments to SWGs. Alphabet has drawn attention for funding "dark money groups" to oppose antitrust regulation. On company positions, Alphabet believes in addressing climate change, yet the Business Roundtable lobbied against the Inflation Reduction Act, the Chamber reportedly has been a "central actor" in dissuading climate legislation over a two-decade period, and CEI is described as a "climate denialist think tank." And while Alphabet does not belong to the controversial American Legislative Exchange Council, it is represented by the Chamber and NetChoice, which each sit on its Private Enterprise Advisory Council."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. " Google has long been a champion of disclosure and transparency, and has adopted a transparency policy for our public policy activities, including our lobbying efforts. Google's GAPP Transparency website includes robust and detailed disclosures, including: • Oversight and Compliance: Our governance and management structure, policies, and procedures regarding oversight and compliance of our lobbying and political engagement activities, including a policy prohibiting trade associations and other organizations from using Google funds for political expenditures. • Public Policy Engagement: The public policy issues on which we are principally engaged. • Disclosure Filings: Links to publicly available reports on our federal lobbying activity and NetPAC filings and details of contributions to national committees and organizations, state and local candidates, and other political organizations. • Memberships: List of trade associations, independent organizations, and other tax-exempt groups that receive the most substantial contributions from Google's GAPP team. Additionally, in compliance with applicable laws, we disclose a significant amount of information in publicly available filings at the state and local level in the U.S., including employees who engaged in lobbying, expenses for lobbying activities, issues addressed, and/or external lobbying firms (depending on the specific disclosure requirements of each jurisdiction)."

PIRC analysis: Political spending is considered to be a different issue than lobbying expenditures. Links to public disclosures of lobbying at the state and federal level are not the same as full disclosure published on the company's website. Moreover, it is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders to be open about lobbying activities and so avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence. The request for a report is considered reasonable. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Give Each Share an Equal Vote

Proponent's argument: The NorthStar Asset Management, Inc. request that our Board take all practicable steps in its control to initiate and adopt a recapitalization plan for all outstanding stock to have one vote per share. "In our company's multi-class voting structure, Class B stock has 10 times the voting rights of Class A. As a result, Mr. Page and Mr. Brin currently control over 51% of our company's total voting power while owning less than 12% of stock – and will continue to retain voting control even though they have stepped down from leading the company. Due to this voting structure, our company takes public shareholder money but refuses shareholders an equal voice in the company's management. For example, it was primarily the weight of the insiders' 10 votes per share that permitted the creation of a non-voting class of stock (class C) even though most shareholders voted to oppose the move. In another example, shareholders note that directly-employed Google workers are partially compensated in Class C stock. Google's compensation philosophy states that "Googlers should share the success of the company," but without voting rights, these employee-shareholders cannot exercise oversight of executives and find themselves subject to repeated layoffs, outsourcing, and interference with their freedom of association. Moreover, Google hires tens of thousands of contracted workers who have even less say over their indirect employer's actions. This lack of worker voice can only depress employee performance and innovation."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our success is owed in large part to the leadership and vision originated by our co-founders, who continue to oversee the company's strategy as members of our Board, and carried on today by Alphabet CEO Sundar Pichai. We have established a consistent track record for continuously building a strong company and creating stockholder value. This value creation is supported by the stability provided by our capital structure, which insulates us from short-term pressures and gives us greater ability to focus on long-term interests. A multi-class structure allows our management to take calculated risks in furtherance of maximizing long-term returns, and the strategic decisions made over the years by Alphabet's management has enabled it to become one of the most profitable companies in the world. We have established a robust governance structure that ensures effective independent oversight and enables our Board to hold management accountable to the best interests of the company and our stockholders. Our Board leadership structure is regularly evaluated and has been modified at times to uphold strong independent oversight in our evolving business and operating environment, including the establishment of the role of independent Chair in 2018. Today, under this structure, our Board, with a majority of independent directors, is led by John L. Hennessy, our non-executive, independent Chair, and our key committees are composed entirely of independent directors, which promotes clear accountability. Further, our independent directors meet in executive sessions in connection with regularly scheduled Board and committee meetings and at other times as necessary to discuss and make informed decisions without the presence of the non-independent directors."

PIRC analysis: It is considered that the existing class structure treats the majority of shareholders inequitably: the principle of one-share-one-vote is considered to be best practice and voting rights should be allocated equitably. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

10. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Reproductive Healthcare Misinformation Risks

Proponent's argument: The Educational Foundation of America request that the Board publish a report within one year of the annual meeting, at reasonable expense and excluding proprietary or legally privileged information, assessing the effectiveness of Alphabet's policies and actions to reduce the dissemination of false or misleading content related to reproductive health care. "Although Google has pledged enforcement action for violations of its policies implicating reproductive healthcare content in the wake of the revocation of constitutional abortion rights in 2022, recent studies show the company continues to facilitate abortion-related misinformation, such as by enabling or optimizing false or misleading content from or regarding crisis pregnancy centers (CPCs), which do not provide abortion services: • A 2023 investigation by the Tech Transparency Project (TTP) revealed that "when a TTP-created Google account identifying as a lower- or average-income woman in Phoenix searched for information on how to get an abortion, more than half the search ads (56%) served by Google came from [CPCs]"; • A 2023 report by the Center for Countering Digital Hate (CCDH) identified 188 CPCs that paid for advertisements to appear in Google Search results related to more than 15,000 different queries about abortion. Almost three-fourths of these clinics "used deceptive means of advertising, advancing false claims that abortions are linked to cancer and other diseases", and 38% had no homepage disclaimer stating that they don't provide abortions – a requirement of Google's advertising policy; • CCDH research from 2022 found that 11% of Google search results for "abortion clinic near me" and "abortion pill" in abortion-restrictive states lead to CPC websites. [...] Inaccurate information and poor content management generally has and can harm Alphabet's bottom line.⁵ Such practices can create reputational and brand risk, and invite regulatory and legislative scrutiny that could affect the profitability of the company's advertisement operations. These content management issues may also amplify systemic risks affecting Alphabet and the overall economy – restricting abortion has been shown to have negative spillover effects on women's employment and educational attainment. To mitigate these risks, an evaluation of the effectiveness of existing company policies is warranted.

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have clear and longstanding policies that govern abortion-related advertising on our platforms, compliant with local laws and regulations. In order to run Search ads that target keywords or phrases related to getting an abortion, advertisers in the U.S., United Kingdom, and Ireland must verify whether they do or do not provide abortions. Based on the information provided in the verification process, an in-ad disclosure will clearly show: "Provides abortions" or "Does not provide abortions." If an advertiser is not certified, they are not able to run ads using keywords related to obtaining an abortion in these countries. While these transparency requirements have been in place since 2019, we continually seek feedback to address the concerns of users, advertisers, and healthcare providers. In 2022 we updated our advertising requirements to make abortion disclosures more clearly visible, in response to user and partner feedback. We welcome continued feedback to improve the clarity of ads we serve, and any user or organization may report an ad through our public reporting channels."

PIRC analysis: Restricting abortion impacts women's rights and societal well-being, deemed discriminatory by human rights bodies. Companies that are seen as a primary source for reproductive healthcare information face scrutiny for allegedly enabling abortion-related misinformation despite enforcement pledges post-constitutional abortion rights revocation. Addressing misinformation risks is crucial for shareholders, impacting profitability and societal trust. Reporting on social risks of misinformation and reproductive health aligns with shareholder interests, informing them of potential risks and promoting responsible corporate practices. Failing to undergo comprehensive reporting on how company's products may inadvertently facilitate misinformation contrary to human rights would not enable investors to assess the company's social impact and mitigate reputational risks associated with misinformation dissemination.

11. Shareholder Resolution: AI Principles and Board Oversight

Proponent's argument: Trillium ESG Global Equity Fund request the board of directors amend the charter of the Audit and Compliance Committee of the Board to add to the committee's "purpose" section appropriate language which makes it clear that the Committee is responsible for overseeing Alphabet's artificial intelligence activities and ensuring management's comprehensive and complete implementation of its AI Principles. "There is evidence which suggests that the AI Principles have not been successfully implemented [at Google]. In August 2023, the New York Times reported on a project "with generative A.I. to perform at least 21 different types of personal and professional tasks, including tools to give users life advice, ideas, planning instructions and tutoring tips." It went on to conclude "The project was indicative of the urgency of Google's effort to propel itself to the front of the A.I. pack and signaled its increasing willingness to trust A.I. systems with sensitive tasks. ... The capabilities also marked a shift from Google's earlier caution on generative A.I." In September 2023, the roll out of Bard to connect to a user's Gmail, Google Docs and Google Drive accounts was described by one prominent commentator as "a mess" and he was surprised it was released given how "erratically it acted". While the company made privacy assurances, those were undercut by its warning against sending Bard "any data you wouldn't want a reviewer to see or Google to use." Relatedly, there is also reporting that calls into question Alphabet's ability to comply with laws designed to protect children. This raises concerns for us that Alphabet's board may not be providing sufficient oversight regarding social impacts. <https://adalytics.io/blog/are-youtube-ads-coppa-compliant>. As government AI interventions focused on public welfare and national security emerge around the world, regulatory risk suggests heightened board oversight is needed. [...] Corporate governance is very important when it comes to AI and it is unclear to us how Alphabet's board is resolving tensions and prioritization challenges that arise between its AI Principles and its financial goals. While the Audit and Compliance Committee charter covers data privacy and security & civil and human rights, we believe the critical nature of AI to the company and its shareholders calls for expressly articulated coverage."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our full Board meetings have regularly and extensively covered AI issues. Our Audit Committee and senior management provides our Board with reports and updates regarding issues and risk exposures regarding AI development. These discussions ensure that our Board is fully involved in the oversight of our business strategies and plans as they relate to AI. Our Audit Committee oversees our enterprise risk management, major risk exposures to our core business and operations, and the steps we take to prevent, detect, monitor, and manage these exposures. These broad topics reflect the global, complex, and evolving nature of our business. AI is important to our core operations and may impact any and all areas of risks relevant to our business, including financial, operational, data privacy and security, competition, legal, regulatory, compliance, child safety, civil and human rights, sustainability, and reputational risks. The broad categories in the Audit Committee's Charter allow the Committee to be nimble and flexible as risks arise and evolve. The Audit Committee has and continues to regularly receive reports from our senior management on our development of new AI technology and integration of this technology into our products and services, our business plans and strategies as they relate to AI, and other AI-related matters."

PIRC analysis: Ethical management of Artificial Intelligence (AI) is increasingly seen as a material issue in society. Several studies link the use of AI for policing purposes to negatively impact racial equity. Issues resulting from ineffective management of AI-related risks can lead to reputational, compliance and value creation risks, but issues tied to technological development are not solely or even mainly related to risk, but also to opportunity. As such, it is supported that the company should take actions to ready itself for technological change by appointing directors with specific knowledge of the issue and hold regular discussions within a board committee regarding AI as part of the company strategy and oversight.

12. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Generative AI Misinformation and Disinformation Risks

Proponent's argument: Arjuna Capital request the Board issue a report, at reasonable cost, omitting proprietary or legally privileged information, to be published within one year of the Annual Meeting and updated annually thereafter, assessing the risks to the Company's operations and finances, and to public welfare, presented by the Company's role in facilitating misinformation and disinformation generated, disseminated, and/or amplified via generative Artificial Intelligence; what steps the Company plans to take to remediate those harms; and how it will measure the effectiveness of such efforts. "Generative Artificial Intelligence (gAI) threatens to amplify misinformation and disinformation, as exemplified by reports about Bard, Gemini, and other Alphabet AI-driven products, including targeted ads, compromising human rights and democratic processes. This is of particular concern as 2024 will feature critical elections in the United States, India, Mexico, and Russia. [...] Sam Altman, leading AI executive, said he is "particularly worried that these models could be used for large-scale disinformation." The Information has noted that gAI drops "the cost of generating believable misinformation by several orders of magnitude." Environmental advocates warn that AI "threatens to amplify the types of climate disinformation that have plagued the social media era." One study found Google's Palm chat technology created misinformation "hallucinations" at a rate of 27 percent, the highest among AI systems tested. Members of the team developing Bard "openly debate the AI tool's effectiveness and utility, with some questioning whether the enormous resources going into development are worth it." Alphabet has invested an estimated USD 200 billion in AI over the last decade. While Alphabet publicly acknowledges the risks of AI and the need for reliable guardrails, it continues to "supercharge" gAI product development without addressing the existential threats posed by the technology, undermining Google's established human rights commitments."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have established policy frameworks that set guardrails on the types of content our models generate. We regularly review and update the content and enforcement of these policies in response to emerging risks and new product features. We also have terms of service that prohibit improper use of our generative AI models and applications. While we have been clear that large-language models occasionally produce incorrect or inaccurate outputs, we take multiple steps, including reinforcement learning, supervised fine-tuning, and internal and external adversarial testing to promote high-quality content. We use additional guardrails such as machine-learning classifiers, to detect and block problematic outputs. We also offer a "double check response" button in Gemini that makes it easy for users to access Google Search to find authoritative content. We continually strive to improve the quality of our generative AI models and applications, through both pre-launch testing and ongoing fine-tuning, which allows us to learn from mistaken outputs and improve model performance over time. We provide transparency into this ongoing work via public reporting, including our Digital Services Act systematic risk assessment and our EU Code of Practice on Disinformation report."

PIRC analysis: The proponent seeks a full assessment of the potential misuse of content produced via generative Artificial Intelligence. Differently from previous misinformation risks, genAI makes it scalable to produce entire campaigns that tend to spread misinformation. The company's provision of products linked to potential violations may expose it to legal, financial, and reputational risks, also in light of its long-standing difficulty to moderate content and detect in a scalable way the content that infringes community standards. The proposal reasonably requests that the company performs a due diligence exercise to assess its exposure to risks deriving from the use of genAI to produce misinformative content, and how to remediate that harm. A vote for the proposal is recommended. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

13. Shareholder Resolution: Human Rights Assessment of AI-Driven Targeted Ad Policies

Proponent's argument: The Shareholder Association for Research & Education direct the board of directors of Alphabet Inc. to publish an independent third party Human Rights Impact Assessment (the "Assessment"), examining the actual and potential human rights impacts of Google's artificial intelligence-driven targeted advertising policies and practices. "Google advertising accounted for approximately 80% of Alphabet's revenue in 2022. Alphabet's ad business, including Google Search, YouTube Ads and Google Network, has grown substantially lately, reaching USD 224 billion in 2022. Algorithmic systems are deployed to deliver targeted advertisements, determining what users see. This often results in and exacerbates systemic discrimination and other human rights violations. Google's current ad infrastructure is driven by third-party cookies, which enable other entities to track users online by accumulating significant personal data. This further puts user privacy at risk. While Google has initiated efforts³⁴⁵ to address privacy shortcomings in its advertising system, it remains unclear how these efforts are supporting the establishment of sufficient and effective human rights due diligence. Google asserts that human rights are "integrated into processes and procedures across the company" with executive oversight. However, to do their due diligence, shareholders need more information on how these considerations specifically apply to its dominant source of revenue."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our Human Rights Program advises product teams on potential civil and human rights impacts, conducts human rights due diligence, and engages external experts and stakeholders. Furthermore, our Human Rights Program is a central function responsible for ensuring that we are meeting our commitment to the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, Global Network Initiative Principles, and other civil and human rights instruments across Google and its products. Our civil and human rights work is integrated into processes and procedures across the company and informs our long-term strategies and day-to-day decision-making. [...] AI is fundamental to many of the Google Ads products we have built over the past decade, driving growth for businesses of all sizes, from features like Smart Bidding to products like Performance Max. For many years, the technology has supported advertisers in maximizing their return on investment. As part of our AI Principles, we have committed to not design or deploy AI technologies "whose purpose contravenes widely accepted principles of international law and human rights." As generative AI helps marketers scale their creative ideas, these features are being developed in line with these Principles. We also do not permit the use of generative AI tools for elections or other sensitive verticals like finance, employment, or housing."

PIRC analysis: Due to the significant revenue generated by online advertising, concerns arise regarding the potential dissemination of misleading information through the platform, posing potential risks to human rights globally, for which there is a growing amount of evidence. While the company asserts the integration of human rights into its processes, questions persist about the application of these principles to its advertising infrastructure, especially concerning user privacy, bias and discrimination. Regulatory frameworks such as the Digital Services Act and upcoming EU's Artificial Intelligence Act aim to address these concerns, mandating companies to uphold human rights in their data handling and algorithmic decision-making (a process that for the EU aims at trustworthy AI). While the company's response indicates that some work has been done in this area, more could be done. As such the request for the assessment appears reasonable. Support is recommended. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

14. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Online Safety for Children

Proponent's argument: Boston Common Asset Management request that, within one year, the Board of Directors adopts targets and publishes annually a report (prepared at reasonable expense, excluding proprietary information) that includes quantitative metrics appropriate to assessing whether YouTube/Alphabet has improved its performance globally regarding child safety impacts and actual harm reduction to children on its platforms. "Child Sexual Abuse Exploitation – YouTube is often noted as a primary online channel for grooming and coercion, livestreaming, and housing Child Sexual Abuse Exploitation (CSAE) material. In Tanzania, total online child sexual exploitation and abuse-related offences on YouTube increased by 50% between 2017 and 2019. YouTube was found to be among the primary platforms reported by children who were offered money or gifts in return for sexual images or videos in Thailand (60% of incidents occurred through YouTube), Kenya (24%), and Uganda (12%). Traffickers in certain industries used YouTube to recruit and interact with those eventually trafficked. Children's Data Privacy – Alphabet has faced legacy issues stemming from YouTube's record USD 170 million fine⁵ paid to the Federal Trade Commission response to allegations that YouTube illegally harvested children's data. Legislative Risk – There has been significant regulatory and legislative action to hold online platforms accountable for their content. The new European Union's Digital Services Act will make identifying, reporting, and removing child sexual abuse material mandatory.⁶ The United Kingdom's Online Safety bill aims to keep internet users, particularly children, safe from fraudulent and harmful content."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have developed an extensive, scalable regulatory compliance operation, supported by a team of internal and external experts in law, risk, and compliance who are focused on assessing regulatory readiness and providing guidance to product teams as necessary to execute on our compliance plans in a timely fashion. It is important to note that most - if not all - of the recent regulatory frameworks include robust reporting requirements. Notably, the Digital Services Act (DSA) requires us to make public a prescribed set of data on a regular basis. Among other things, the DSA requires reporting and risk assessments related specifically to children using covered platforms. In addition, the EU interim regulation to combat online child sexual abuse requires an annual transparency report. We also expect to file regular assessments under the UK Online Safety Act. And in 2023 we provided information for inclusion in Australia's eSafety Commissioner's report on online child safety. Given the extensive nature of these reporting requirements, we believe that the information called for under these frameworks will be more substantive and informative in nature than the type of report the proponent has requested. In addition to providing child safety-related metrics in accordance with global regulatory frameworks, Google and YouTube are committed to sharing data that sheds light on how the policies and actions of governments affect privacy, security, and access to information online and have voluntarily issued detailed, timely disclosures regarding compliance and product changes in relation to new regulations."

PIRC analysis: The proponent asks for a report on the risks associated with potential and actual risks for children (personally or mentally). Such risks can have significant reputational and financial consequences for a company and it is in the best interests of shareholders to be informed of the Company's exposure to and management of such risks. While the company indicates that it is committed to internet's governance and to prevent risks to children deriving from it, it does not disclose the risks to which the company might be exposed regarding additional violations of child safety. Ensuring that users, advertisements and products do not cause setbacks to child rights or straightly violate child rights is considered to be due diligence, in order to uphold company's policies on human rights and minimize corresponding risks. As such, a vote for the resolution is recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs

but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. There is no deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus. Best practice would see half of the bonus deferred in shares over at least two years. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ADB. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Approve 2024 Equity Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. It is proposed to reduce the number of shares available for grants by approximately 76% (to 8,000,000 shares, which reflects approximately 7% of stock outstanding), compared to the 33,859,046 shares available for grant under the 2015 Equity Incentive Plan as of March 31, 2024. Shares subject to awards granted from April 1, 2024 through the effective date of the 2024 Equity Incentive Plan shall reduce the number of shares available for grant under the 2024 Equity Incentive Plan as specified in the 2024 Equity Incentive Plan.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

CARD FACTORY PLC AGM - 20-06-20243. Re-elect Paul Moody - Chair (Non Executive)

Chair of the Board and of the Nomination Committee. Not considered independent as Mr. Moody assumed the interim role of Executive Chairman from 1 July 2020 to 8 March 2021. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Additionally, it is considered that the Nomination and Remuneration Committees should be fully independent.

The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time.

The Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

ABRDN EUROPEAN LOGISTICS INCOME PLC AGM - 24-06-2024*13. That pursuant to Article 163.2 the Company continue its business as presently constituted.*

Standard resolution. It is proposed that the Company continue as an investment trust. The average discount over the year was -34.0%, and over three years, -25.6%. The decline in performance and the discount to NAV which has been above 10% for each of the last three years, raises questions about its viability. The continuation of an investment trust is not supported if the trust's year end share price has been at a discount to NAV of more than 10% for each of the past three fiscal year ends unless the board has provided a clear, cogent and compelling rationale, within the context of its overall investment strategy, in respect of the discount and the actions it is taking to address the situation. Given the Trust's significant discount to NAV over the past three years and the absence of appropriate justification, it is recommended that Camden oppose.

The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

17. Approve the Oxford Biomedica 2024 Deferred Bonus Plan

It is proposed to pay a portion of the short-term (annual) variable component of remuneration in financial instruments. This proposal does not feature additional remuneration.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

6. Introduce an Independent Chairman Rule

Proponent's argument: The National Legal and Policy Center propose that the Board adopt a policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary, to require hereafter that that two separate people hold the office of the Chairman and the office of the CEO. "The Chief Executive Officer of Salesforce, Inc. is also Board Chairman. These roles – each with separate, different responsibilities that are critical to the health of a successful corporation – are greatly diminished when held by a singular company official, weakening its governance structure."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board believes it is important to retain flexibility to determine the most appropriate leadership structure for the Board, in light of the Company's circumstances and Board composition at any given time. Eliminating this flexibility in favor of the rigid and prescriptive approach of this proposal is not in the best interests of the Company or our stockholders. The Board is committed to sound corporate governance that facilitates strong independent leadership and effective and informed decision-making. The Board regularly reviews its leadership structure to assess whether it continues to best serve the evolving needs of the Board and the Company. Given the strong mission, vision and leadership that has produced our history of sustained, strong operational and financial performance through past business cycles and our successful transformation over the past year, the Board believes that our stockholders continue to be best served by this leadership structure. Under the current structure, we have executed on key aspects of our strategy and delivered strong results for our stockholders across key metrics, such as cash flow and non-GAAP operating margin, despite a cautious macroeconomic environment."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Severance Payments/Pension Benefits

Proponent's argument John Chevedden proposes that the Board adopt a policy to seek shareholder approval of senior managers' new or renewed pay package that provides for golden parachute payments with an estimated value exceeding 2.99 times the sum of the executive's base salary plus target short-term bonus. This proposal only applies to Named Executive Officers. "Golden parachute payments include cash, equity or other compensation that is paid out or vests due to a senior executive's termination for any reason. Payments include those provided under employment agreements, severance plans, and change-in-control clauses in long-term equity plans, but not life insurance, pension benefits, or deferred compensation earned and vested prior to termination. Generous performance-based pay can sometimes be justified but shareholder ratification of golden parachutes better aligns management pay with shareholder interests."

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board believes the concerns raised by the proponent are already and more appropriately addressed by our existing cash severance limitation policy, which limits cash severance for our Section 16 officers to no more than 2.99x base salary plus annual bonus target, absent stockholder approval. Because the Company already has a cash severance limitation policy in place, adopting the policy requested by the proponent would be unduly restrictive and not in the best interests of the Company or our stockholders. The Board and its Compensation Committee, composed entirely of independent directors elected annually to the Board by our stockholders, are best positioned to design and implement executive compensation practices and principles that make sense for our business and that are aligned with the interests of our stockholders."

PIRC analysis: The company's argument of losing competitive advantage by submitting severance to shareholders' approval is not considered to be an effective one: as a matter of fact, ratification of severance agreements or payments is common practice in developed markets overseas (such as France or Italy). On the contrary, this proposal is considered to be an advance in corporate governance, as it will allow to reduce the gap between shareowners and management. It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Public Health Costs from Sale of Tobacco Products

Proponent's argument: The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia ask "that the board commission and disclose a report on the external public health costs created by the sale of tobacco products by our company (the "Company") and the manner in which such costs affect the vast majority of its shareholders who rely on overall market returns." The supporting statements include "The negative health and productivity impacts from consumption of tobacco products impose $1.2 trillion in social damage; tobacco's unpriced social burden amounts to almost 3 percent of global GDP annually. Yet , in spite of the Company dedicating an entire division , Kroger Health, to addressing its customers' healthcare needs, as well as the overwhelming evidence that tobacco - a known carcinogen that impairs respiratory function - significantly prejudices the health outcomes of smokers, the Company continues to sell tobacco products in its stores. In 2019 the company discontinued the sale of e-cigarettes in response to news reports of vaping-related illnesses and deaths. The science on cigarettes and other combustible tobacco products is settled. They cause illness and death. These public health costs, year after year, are devastating to economic growth and further compound the financial devastation wrought by the COVID-19 pandemic. Yet Kroger does not disclose any methodology to address the public health costs of its tobacco sales. Thus, shareholders have no guidance as to costs the Company is externalizing and consequent economic harm. This information is essential to shareholders, the majority of whom are beneficial owners with broadly diversified interests."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Company states "We recognize our responsibility as a business to support our communities and help families by making it easier for them to live healthier lives. We also believe in our customers' freedom of choice, and adult customers can choose to purchase tobacco products understanding fully the potential health impacts. [...] Tobacco sales, like the sales of many products, are governed by regulations, which we strictly follow. The Company's Tobacco Sales Policy is designed to comply with these regulations and affirm our commitment to the health and welfare of our nation's youth by reducing adolescent access to tobacco. The policy outlines internal business procedures and best practices to maintain compliance at retail stores. [...] Assessing the external public health costs related to the Company's sale of a single category of products is not reasonable or practicable given the resources and expertise required to consider all externalities and related topics outside of our control. In light of the above, we do not believe an additional report would add meaningfully to the extensive body of research currently available on this subject and therefore do not believe such an additional report is necessary."

PIRC analysis: Report on Public Health Costs from Sale of Tobacco Products is crucial for fostering transparency, accountability, and long-term shareholder value. This proposal aligns with the principles of responsible corporate citizenship by urging Kroger to disclose the external public health costs associated with its tobacco sales. Such transparency is vital as it allows shareholders to understand the broader economic and social impacts of the company's activities, particularly in relation to public health. The significant social and economic burdens caused by tobacco use, as highlighted by the proposal, underscore the need for comprehensive reporting on how these externalities affect overall market returns and shareholder interests. By endorsing this proposal, Kroger would demonstrate its commitment to ethical governance, reinforce its health-centric initiatives under Kroger Health, and align its business practices with the growing investor demand for sustainable and socially responsible operations. This proactive approach not only mitigates potential risks but also enhances the company's reputation and fosters trust among stakeholders, ultimately supporting sustainable economic growth and protecting shareholder value.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Listing of Charitable Contributions of $10,000 or more

Proponent's argument The Louis B & Diana R Eichhold Trust request "the Board of Directors consider listing on the Company website any recipient of $10,000 or more of direct contributions, excluding employee matching gifts". The proponents state "Absent a system of accountability and transparency, some charitable contributions may be made unwisely, potentially harming the Company's reputation and shareholder value. Corporate philanthropic gifts should be given as much exposure as possible, lest their intended impact on goodwill is diminished. For example, if we gave to the American Cancer Society, thousands our stakeholders might potentially approve of our interest in challenging this disease. Likewise, our support of Planned Parenthood could win the praise of millions of Americans who have had an abortion at one of their facilities. Educational organizations like the Southern Poverty Law Center have seen an increase in funding since they included several conservative Christian organizations on their list of hate groups. Our stake holders and customers might be similarly enthused if we supported them. Be it the Girl Scouts, American Heart Association, Boys and Girls Club of America, Red Cross, or countless possible recipients, our support should be publicly noted. Those who might disagree with our decisions can play a valuable role also. Some charities may be controversial."

Company's response The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Board state "Kroger follows best practices and specific guidelines when reviewing grant requests. Our Donation Guidelines provide direction on the types of organizations that Kroger supports and, importantly, make clear the types of organizations to which donations will not be granted. We accept and consider donation requests from 501(c)(3) registered nonprofit organizations through an online grant management platform. We use the Guidestar Charity Check to confirm they meet all Internal Revenue Service requirements to receive grants and donations. [...] We believe the extensive information and other disclosures already provided in Kroger's annual ESG report, The Kroger Co. Foundation annual report, The Kroger Co. Zero Hunger | Zero Waste Foundation annual report, public filings, and our website provide ample disclosures related to charitable giving. Additional reporting on charitable giving at this time is an unnecessary and inefficient use of shareholder resources.

PIRC analysis: The transparency and completeness of the company's reporting on charitable spending could be improved. The board's argument makes clear that its compliance with lobbying and other spending disclosure regulations complies only with the minimum requirements: this is considered incomplete and insufficient. Moreover, it is to the benefit of the company and its shareholders to be open about charitable spending and so avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, that the company may be using shareholders' funds in an inappropriate way to gain undue influence (for example by disclosing as charitable contributions some donations that should instead be reported as lobbying or political spending). The request for a report is considered reasonable and a vote for the resolution is recommended.

It is recommended that Camden vote in favour.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Living Wage Policy

Proponent's argument: Shareholder Commons, on behalf of LGIM America request that "the board and management exercise their discretion to establish Company wage policies that are consistent with fiduciary duties and reasonably designed to provide workers with the minimum earnings necessary to meet a family's basic needs, because Company compensation practices that fail to provide a living wage are harmful to the economy and therefore to the returns of diversified shareholders." The proponent states "Kroger increased associates' average hourly wage to $18/hour in 2023, suggesting its lowest paid workers earn still less. The living wage in 2022 was $25.02 per hour per worker annually for a family of four (two working adults). Kroger's CEO, meanwhile, makes 671 times more than the Company's median employee. While Kroger's workforce is 49.6 percent female and 40.6 percent people of color, these groups compose only 31.7 percent and 26.3 percent of store leaders, indicating they make up a disproportionate number of employees not earning a living wage. In response to a recent survey, 75 percent of Kroger workers said they were food insecure, 14 percent said they were homeless, and 63 percent said they earned too little to cover basic expenses."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Board states "Kroger is proud to be an employer with a culture of opportunity and advancement that has created an environment where people from any walk of life can come for a job and discover for a career. Kroger has provided an incredible number of people with first jobs, second chances, and lifelong careers and we take seriously our role as a leading employer in the United States. Kroger's national average hourly rate is nearly $19 per hour and its average hourly rate inclusive of benefits like health care and retirement is nearly $25 per hour. In fact, Kroger has raised wages more than 33% the last five years, far outpacing inflation. The Company has invested a total of $2.4 billion in incremental investments since 2018, which has increased our national average hourly rate of pay from $13.66 to nearly $19, or nearly $25 per hour with comprehensive benefits. In addition to Kroger's historic investments in wages and benefits, the Company is committed to growing tomorrow's leaders through programs including free financial coaching and our education benefit, which offers associates up to $21,000 in tuition reimbursements, available to both full and part time associates."

PIRC analysis: While the company raised its minimum hourly wage, the living wage for a family of four is still above that amount. A living wage, as opposed to the legal minimum wage, reflects the actual cost of living in a specific location and supports workers in meeting essential expenses while having some discretionary income. The CEO's pay disparity and underrepresentation of people of color in higher roles highlight the issue of employees not earning a living wage. Closing the global living wage gap could boost productivity and GDP significantly, while underpaid workforce would be less productive and there would be associated costs of retention and attraction. While the company may prioritize profit in the short term, by paying below a living wage, this trade-off impacts society and shareholder returns negatively. By adopting a living wage policy, the company can address inequality and racial disparities, potentially enhancing its reputation and employee morale. This move aligns with broader societal benefits, as research indicates that closing wage gaps can significantly boost economic growth. Implementing a living wage policy not only supports workers but also contributes to a more equitable and sustainable economy, benefiting both shareholders and society as a whole.

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuade shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

Standard proposal.

Having a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term climate target is considered essential. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. It is welcome that the company has both these targets in place. However, it is also necessary to have both medium and long term targets to guide business planning and strategy in a way that is aligned to keeping global warming within 1.5 degrees. The absence of either of these targets (given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks for companies strategically important for the transition to net zero) is considered to fall short of best practice. The medium-term targets do not adequately cover scope 1,2 and 3. As such, they are considered to be inadequate. Due to the lack of director elections.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Approval of an amendment and restatement of the Company's Amended and Restated 2011 Stock Incentive Plan to increase the number of shares authorized for issuance.

The Amended 2011 Plan is an 'omnibus' stock plan that provides for a variety of equity award vehicles to maintain flexibility. The Amended 2011 Plan permits the grant of stock options, stock appreciation rights, restricted and unrestricted stock awards and stock units. The Plan is presented as an omnibus plan, which means that bundled within the same official plan there are various incentive plan elements aimed at rewarding different groups of employees, officers and executives. However, it is noted that the Compensation Committee retains the power to select employees to receive awards and determine the terms and conditions of awards (and also note that 'management employees' appear most likely to be the principal beneficiaries of the Plan). 7. Shareholder Resolution: Amendment to the Bylaws

Proponent's argument: The Trian Group request that "each provision or amendment of the Amended and Restated Bylaws of The Walt Disney Company (the "Corporation") approved by the Board of Directors of the Corporation (and not by the Corporation's stockholders) subsequent to November 30, 2023 and prior to the approval of this resolution be, and hereby is, repealed, effective as of the time this resolution is approved by the Corporation's stockholders."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "he Board carefully considered the Bylaws Proposal and concluded, for the reasons noted below, that a blanket prohibition on Bylaw amendments prior to the Annual Meeting would not be in the best interests of the Company and our shareholders. Each of the members of the Board has fiduciary duties to the Company's shareholders. Specifically, the Board is responsible for managing, or directing the management of, the business and affairs of the Company. In meeting this responsibility, the Board has a fiduciary duty to act in the best interests of the Company and all of its shareholders. Further, the Company has adopted policies and practices designed to ensure and encourage its independent exercise of such duty. As a result, the Company's Bylaws expressly provide that the Bylaws may be amended by the Board. It is important that the Board's ability to act in the best interests of the Company and all shareholders not be limited. The Board believes that the Bylaws Proposal would undermine the ability of the Board to oversee the business and affairs of the Company and to protect all of the Company's shareholders, as it would limit the Board's ability to adopt changes to the Bylaws (which is expressly permitted by the Bylaws), even in cases where the Board determines that the changes are in the best interests of the Company and its shareholders. While the Board has not adopted any amendments to the Bylaws after November 30, 2023 and does not currently expect to adopt any amendments to the Bylaws prior to the Annual Meeting, the Board may determine that an amendment is in the best interest of the shareholders. The Board believes that the automatic repeal of any duly adopted Bylaw amendment, irrespective of its content, could have the effect of repealing one or more properly adopted Bylaw amendments that the Board determined to be in the best interests of the Company and its shareholders and that was adopted in furtherance of the Board's fiduciary duties and in accordance with the Bylaws, including in response to future events not yet known to the Company."

PIRC Analysis: On 30 November 2023, Disney amended their bylaws to enhance the disclosure requirements connected to director nominations proposed by shareholders. The bylaws require additional background information for nominees and further procedural requirements require additional steps for director nominee proposals at general meetings. The amended bylaws denote that stockholders who intend on nominating directors outside of the Company's nominees, must ensure that they are in compliance with SEC Rule 14a-19. It is noted however that the Company's nominees are not equally required to adhere to SEC guidelines on director nomination. Disney currently maintains third party search firms for director nominees, but similar disclosure requirements for non-Company nominees are entailing higher requirements for shareholder nominees than for board nominees. This is considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Board size

Proponent's argument: Blackwells Group proposes that 'the stockholders of the Company adopt a non-binding, advisory resolution requesting that, in the event any candidate of The Walt Disney Company fails to be elected at the 2024 Annual Meeting for failure to receive more votes than a non-Walt Disney Company nominee, the board of directors of The Walt Disney Company shall take all necessary actions to increase the size of the board by the number of Walt Disney Company nominees so failing to be elected and appoint any and all such Walt Disney Company nominees to fill the newly created corresponding vacancies.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'The Board carefully considered the Advisory Vote Proposal and concluded, for the reasons noted below, that an increase in the size of the Board for the purpose of overriding the results of an election of directors would not be in the best interests of the Company and our shareholders, even if any such resulting vacancies would be filled by the nominees recommended by your Board. Working closely with the full Board, the Governance and Nominating Committee develops criteria for Board membership, taking into account the needs of the Board and the Company at the time, and regularly assesses the composition of the Board and considers the extent to which the Board continues to reflect such criteria. In connection therewith, the Board also assesses its size from time to time to consider whether it would be prudent and in the best interests of the Company and our shareholders to increase or decrease its size. In light of such assessments, the Board believes that the slate of twelve talented directors recommended by the Board represents the optimal size and composition, with skill sets, experiences and professional backgrounds representing a diversity of perspectives and characteristics that are particularly relevant to Disney's business and strategic objectives. However, even if any of such twelve directors recommended by your Board are not elected to the Board, the Board intends to respect the results of the election and the will of our shareholders. Further, the Board believes that the size and composition of the Board should be carefully tailored to the current needs of the Board and Company at the time. Accordingly, the Board does not believe that increasing the size of the Board and appointing the unelected directors as provided by the proposal would be in the best interests of shareholders. The Board, together with the Governance and Nominating Committee, will continue to assess the size and composition of the Board from time to time to determine whether any increase or decrease would be in the best interests of the Company and our shareholders, and in such case, take the necessary actions to effect such change, as permitted under the Company's bylaws.'

PIRC Analysis: It is considered best practice that any director who fails to be elected at the general meeting, shall not be re-proposed to be appointed to the board. Increasing the size of the Board to fill vacancies is not considered to be best practice. It is considered that the size of the Board should depend on the business needs and the skills needed at a given time to oversee mitigation of risks and future opportunities, not on making space for those directors who fail to be elected at the general meeting.

EDP RENOVAVEIS SA AGM - 04-04-2024

4. Approve the Remuneration Report, Governance Report and Management Report

It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance.

8.H. Re-elect Antonio Gomes Mota - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Appointments and Remuneration Committee. It is noted that the director has been on the board of the EDP Group from 2009 to 2018. Therefore not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.

There are concerns with the company's remuneration policy and it is considered that the Chair of the Remuneration Committee is should be held accountable for these concerns.

Chair of the Remuneration Committee. The director chairs a committee which is not fully independent which does not meet Camden guidelines.

9. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out.

RIO TINTO PLC AGM - 04-04-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately.

Having a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term climate target is considered essential. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. It is welcome that the company has both these targets in place. However, it is also necessary to have both medium and long term targets to guide business planning and strategy in a way that is aligned to keeping global warming within 1.5 degrees. The absence of either of these targets (given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks for companies strategically important for the transition to net zero) is considered to fall short of best practice.

Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. The vesting scale attached to the LTIP is considered to be overly narrow. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Report for UK Law Purposes

19. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditors of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 15.79% of audit fees during the year under review and 15.92% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. 3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Impacts of Divestment

Proponent's argument: InvestNow propose that ' Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ('CIBC') commission and issue a report disclosing the Bank's exposure to oil and gas divestment and to qualify and quantify the impacts of divestment from the Canadian oil and gas sector on shareholder value and other relevant economic analysis should CIBC continue on the path toward currently established Net Zero objectives. Attacks on the oil and gas sector are coming from all fronts. Celebrities, internet influencers, radical activist shareholders, ideologically driven financial alliances and well-funded non-profit organizations are all calling for 'divestment' and promoting elimination of the Canadian oil and gas sector in the next 25 years. We are calling on CIBC to commission a report that would provide data and analysis on the impact on revenue projections, profit, share price, and the impact on the Canadian economy overall, as the bank adopts policies or guidelines aimed at suppressing Canada's oil and gas sector through a divestment policy. The banking sector has a critical role to play in Canada's economy and prosperity. The oil and gas sector also has a critical role to play in Canada's economy and prosperity. The world will continue to use fossil fuels throughout this century, including beyond 2050 notwithstanding current Net Zero aspirations. If the oil and gas the world needs is not supplied by Canadian energy companies it will be supplied by authoritarian regimes in poorly regulated, undemocratic countries that are less responsible and less environmentally friendly.'

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. 'CIBC recognizes the long-standing contribution of Canada's oil and gas sector to our national economy, and guided by our purpose-driven culture, has not adopted a divestment approach as we continue to support our clients as they transition to a low-carbon economy through financing, advisory services and investments in innovation. Our bank recognizes the important role that the financial sector has in the low carbon transition, including our ambition to achieve net-zero greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions from our operational and financing activities by 2050, and our approach factors commercial, risk management and regulatory considerations. For example, we remain committed to supporting our clients, and we are partnering within the broader ecosystem to mobilize capital, inform public policy, and enable technology and talent to support the transition to the low carbon economy. We are also actively preparing for and incorporating requirements for existing and upcoming regulatory frameworks, such as the OSFI B-15 Guidelines, which outline governance and risk management expectations related to financial institutions' management of climate-related risks... As we continue to execute on our climate strategy in support of our net-zero ambition by 2050, we remain committed to continuing to engage with our energy clients, and supporting their transition to a low-carbon economy while simultaneously managing climate-related risks in our business operations and transparently disclosing our progress.'

PIRC analysis: Instead of short-term costs and benefits and excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy, it is considered that shareholders should instead be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change is not considered to be in shareholders best interests. Fossil fuels financing is risky, with records of several human rights and environmental violations and returns that can pay out only years after the initial expensive investment. Although some case studies show that banks are getting increasingly involved in the energy transition, most of the financial system as a whole is still oriented mainly towards financing the linear economy when not directly fossil fuel enterprises. A report published in May 2021 'Banking on Climate Chaos' calculates that the world's biggest 60 banks have provided USD 3.8 trillion of financing for fossil fuel companies since the Paris climate deal in 2015, and overall funding remains on an upward trend. Nevertheless, consumers are increasingly reported to feel that brands have a responsibility to take care of the planet, and UN's Business and Sustainable Development Commission issued a forecast where sustainability is mentioned as to be worth at least USD 12 trillion a year by 2030 to businesses. As such, financing the energy transition could be indeed an opportunity especially for banks, as the size of a greener economy is directly related to the availability of financing for those projects.

14. Authorise Share Repurchase

Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

13. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.
The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.
It is recommended that Camden oppose.

14. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent, such as discontinuing equity programs with a one year performance period and returning to a structure for PBS grant based on multiple pre established quantitative performance metrics measured over 3 years. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Impact of Oil and Gas Divestment

Proponent's argument: InvestNow Inc request "that Scotiabank commission and issue a report disclosing the Bank's exposure to oil and gas divestment and to qualify and quantify the impacts of divestment from the Canadian oil and gas sector on shareholder value and other relevant economic analysis should Scotiabank continue on the path toward currently established Net Zero objectives. Attacks on the oil and gas sector are coming from all fronts. Celebrities, internet influencers, radical activist shareholders, ideologically driven financial alliances and well-funded non-profit organizations are all calling for "divestment" and promoting elimination of the Canadian oil and gas sector in the next 25 years. We are calling on Scotiabank to commission a report that would provide data and analysis on the impact on revenue projections, profit, share price, and the impact on the Canadian economy overall, as the bank adopts policies or guidelines aimed at suppressing Canada's oil and gas sector through a divestment policy. The banking sector has a critical role to play in Canada's economy and prosperity. The oil and gas sector also has a critical role to play in Canada's economy and prosperity. The world will continue to use fossil fuels throughout this century, including beyond 2050 notwithstanding current Net Zero aspirations. If the oil and gas the world needs is not supplied by Canadian energy companies it will be supplied by authoritarian regimes in poorly regulated, undemocratic countries that are less responsible and less environmentally friendly."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We recognize that climate change is one of the most pressing issues of our time. As an international financial institution, we have an important role to play in addressing climate change and supporting the transition to a low-carbon economy across our footprint and around the world. In support of the Government of Canada's net-zero commitments, the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, and as a signatory to the NZBA in October 2021, we have set an objective to become a net-zero bank. We also recognize the importance of the oil and gas sector to the Canadian economy and the bank's role in our clients' transitions to net zero. This is why we have not adopted a divestment policy. Instead and as part of our objective of being a net-zero bank, we are committed to helping our clients develop, implement, and achieve their respective transition goals to a low-carbon economy. As part of our transition plan, we work closely with our clients, supporting them as they navigate the transition to a low-carbon economy. Our Climate Commitments outline how we support our customers in this transition, ensure robust climate-related governance, manage climate-related risks, decarbonize our own operations, and contribute to the ongoing dialogue on climate change."

PIRC analysis: Instead of short-term costs and benefits and excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy, it is considered that shareholders should instead be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change is not considered to be in shareholders best interests. Fossil fuels financing is risky, with records of several human rights and environmental violations and returns that can pay out only years after the initial expensive investment. Although some case studies show that banks are getting increasingly involved in the energy transition, most of the financial system as a whole is still oriented mainly towards financing the linear economy when not directly fossil fuel enterprises. A report published in May 2021 "Banking on Climate Chaos" calculates that the world's biggest 60 banks have provided USD 3.8 trillion of financing for fossil fuel companies since the Paris climate deal in 2015, and overall funding remains on an upward trend. Nevertheless, consumers are increasingly reported to feel that brands have a responsibility to take care of the planet, and UN's Business and Sustainable Development Commission issued a forecast where sustainability is mentioned as to be worth at least USD 12 trillion a year by 2030 to businesses. As such, financing the energy transition could be indeed an opportunity especially for banks, as the size of a greener economy is directly related to the availability of financing for those projects.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. 4. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

- The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance.

'The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances. The provision would only permit exculpation for direct claims brought by stockholders, as opposed to claims brought by or on behalf of the Company. An oppose vote is recommended on the grounds that officers should be held accountable for their actions and the addition of exculpation provisions for officers may hinder this accountability.'

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

3. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 1.19% of audit fees during the year under review and 5.14% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

6. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards made under all schemes during the year considered excessive as exceed 200% of base salary. Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the European peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

7. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 750% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

8. Amend AstraZeneca Performance Share Plan 2020

The Board proposes the approval changes to the AstraZeneca Performance Share Plan 2020. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

TORM PLC AGM - 11-04-20241. *Receive the Annual Report

Strategic Report meets guidelines. Adequate environmental and employment policies are in place and relevant, up-to-date, quantified environmental reporting is disclosed. The Company also disclosed the proportion of women on the Board, in Executive Management positions and within the whole organisation. However, there are important corporate governance concerns such as too few independent NEDs (1 out of 5) and a complexed voting rights system that will make it hard for the minority shareholders to convey their opinions or concerns. Owing to this it is recommended to oppose the annual report.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the remuneration report for the year under review. Overall disclosure below market standard, and the remuneration committee maintains discretion while granting awards. Furthermore the Company utilises a restricted share plan that is not tied to performance, that has lead to excessive variable remuneration during the year under review.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 3. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy, which remains unchanged from the previous policy approved in 2021. The overall maximum awards that can be achieved cannot be determined due to the nature of the RSU share scheme, which are not tied to performance conditions. Potential severance is excessive as it exceeds 12 months and the Company has not disclosed whether variable remuneration may be included in severance pay.

4. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors of the Company

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 7.69% of audit fees during the year under review. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is 'useful to users'. That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being 'useful for users', a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the 'expectations gap' being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

7. Re-elect Christopher H. Boehringer - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Remuneration and Nomination Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Additionally, in terms of best practice, it is considered that the Remuneration and Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the former chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. 4. Shareholder Resolution: Introduce an Independent Chair Rule

Proponent's argument: John Chevedden requested that the Board of Directors adopt an enduring policy, and amend the governing documents as necessary in order that 2 separate people hold the office of the Chairman and the office of the CEO. Whenever possible, the Chairman of the Board shall be an Independent Director. The Board has the discretion to select a Temporary Chairman of the Board who is not an Independent Director to serve while the Board is seeking an Independent Chairman of the Board. This policy could be phased in when there is a contract renewal for our current CEO or for the next CEO transition. "A lead director is no substitute for an independent board chairman. A lead director cannot call a special shareholder meeting and cannot even call a special meeting of the board. A lead director can delegate most of his lead director duties to the CEO office and then simply rubber-stamp it. There is no way shareholders can be sure of what goes on. A lead director can be given a list of duties but there is no rule that prevents the Chairman from overriding the lead director in any of the so-called lead director duties. Unfortunately management has stacked the deck against this worthy proposal. For instance management sends out multiple reminders for shareholders to vote to the shareholders who are most likely to have no access to independent proxy voting advice. Thus the shareholder support for this proposal topic at Dow will be understated."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board has an average tenure of five years for its Directors and leads its industry in diversity. This diverse and fresh thinking informs the current leadership structure with Jim Fitterling serving the combined role as Chairman and CEO and Richard K. Davis serving as the independent Lead Director. Mr. Davis was first elected to this position in April 2021 following the 2021 Annual Meeting of Stockholders, and was elected for a second time following the 2022 Annual Meeting of Stockholders. Mr. Davis has significant experience in corporate governance and public company management as a current and former director on other public company boards and a former CEO of a large public company. The Board's leadership structure is driven by the needs of the Company and it is necessary to retain flexibility of the Board to manage its operations in a manner that best serves the interests of the stockholders and the Company. Under the Company's existing governance practices, there is no requirement to combine or separate the leadership roles, and in fact, the Company has had both combined and separate Board leadership roles throughout its history, depending on the Company's need at the time. The determination of the most appropriate Board leadership structure is made on an annual basis by the Board, which allows the Board the flexibility to make changes to Board leadership that are in the best interests of the Company and its stockholders. As a part of that process, the Board reviews whether the existing leadership structure provides strong independent oversight while balancing the need for extensive knowledge of business operations, risks and strategy implementation and accountability for Company performance."

PIRC analysis: There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. It is considered that an independent Chair can provide independent oversight of management and facilitates clearer lines of accountability with respect to corporate decisions. The date of appointment of the current audit firm is undisclosed, meaning the length of tenure is not known. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is 'useful to users'. That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being 'useful for users', a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the 'expectations gap' being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

17. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises and this is not the case.

19. Authorise Share Repurchase

The authority is limited to 10% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. These resolutions will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. No clear justification was provided by the Board.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages.

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions.

WHIRLPOOL CORPORATION AGM - 16-04-2024

1a. Re-elect Samuel R. Allen - Senior Independent Director

Lead Independent Director and Chair of the Corporate Governance and Nominating Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that a Lead Independent Director should be independent, in order to fulfil the responsibilities assigned to that role.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. M&T BANK CORPORATION AGM - 16-04-2024

1.02. Re-elect Robert T. Brady - Senior Independent Director

Senior Independent Director. Not considered independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that a Senior Independent Director should be independent, in order to fulfil the responsibilities assigned to that role. Additionally, Mr. Brady is the Chair of the Nominating & Governance Committee. As the Chair of the Nominating & Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

Additionally, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. For the year under review, annual bonus payouts are considered to be excessive as they represent more than 200% of base salary. HUNTING PLC AGM - 17-04-2024

There are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. However, the deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is not considered adequate. Half of the bonus should be deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve New 2024 Hunting Performance Share Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this. In addition, as none of the members of the Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice. Overall, a vote to Oppose is recommended.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. 4. Shareholder Resolution: Simple Majority Voting

Proponent's argument: Mr. John Chevedden request that the board take each step necessary so that each voting requirement in the charter and bylaws that calls for a greater than simple majority vote be replaced by a requirement for a majority of the votes cast for and against applicable proposals, or a simple majority in compliance with applicable laws. If necessary this means the closest standard to a majority of the votes cast for and against such proposals consistent with applicable laws. Shareholder argues that: "Supermajority voting requirements have been found to be one of 6 entrenching mechanisms that are negatively related to company performance according to "What Matters in Corporate Governance" by Lucien Bebchuk, Alma Cohen and Allen Ferrell of the Harvard Law School. Supermajority requirements are used to block initiatives supported by most shareowners but opposed by a status quo management."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The board argues the following: "The Board believes that the supermajority voting standards under our governance documents are appropriately limited to specific foundational items that promote the success of Sherwin-Williams and the long-term strategic focus of our Board and management team. Under our Charter, a majority vote requirement already applies to most matters submitted for shareholder approval, including director elections. Furthermore, Article Sixth of our Charter already provides that actions subject to supermajority voting standards under the Ohio Revised Code may be taken by a majority of the voting power of the Company. [...] Under a majority voting standard, a small group of shareholders would have the power to approve actions that would significantly alter the governance of the Company, including enacting fundamental changes to the Company's corporate governance structure or operations that could negatively impact the interests of all shareholders. This means a small group of shareholders could act in their own self-interests and possibly to the detriment of the Company's other shareholders. Because supermajority provisions give holders of less than a majority of the outstanding shares the ability to defeat a proposed fundamental change, they generally have the effect of giving minority shareholders a greater voice in a company's corporate governance."

PIRC analysis: It is considered to be best practice that shareholders should have the right to approve most matters submitted for their consideration by a simple majority of the shares voted. There are concerns that the supermajority provisions which relate to the company's corporate governance documents could frustrate attempts by the majority of shareholders to make the company more accountable or strengthen the independence of the Board.

After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. 5. Shareholder Resolution: Mandatory Director Resignation Policy

Proponent's argument: John Cheveddan, a shareholder of the Company, proposes that the Board of Directors Change the Adobe Corporate Governance Guidelines to state that the Board of Directors must accept the resignation of a director who fails to obtain a majority vote in an uncontested election. Currently the Adobe Board can reject the resignation of a director who fails to get a majority vote in an uncontested election."The Adobe Corporate Governance Guidelines already provide the Board with adequate time to find a replacement director in case of a failed election and the Corporate Governance Guidelines also allow the Board to reduce its size. When shareholders give a director a no confidence vote it is important that the Board respect the vote of the shareholders. Currently a director who fails to obtain a majority vote could be the Adobe Lead Director or could chair a key Adobe Board Committee. It would be a greater disrespect to shareholders if the Board allowed such a director to linger on the board after a failed election."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "In an uncontested election, if an incumbent director fails to receive a majority of the votes cast on his or her re-election, the Governance and Sustainability Committee, which consists solely of independent directors, will promptly consider the tendered resignation and recommend to the Board whether to accept or reject it. In making such recommendation, the Governance and Sustainability Committee will consider all factors it deems relevant, including, without limitation: (i) the stated reasons why stockholders voted "against" such director; (ii) the director's length of service and qualifications; (iii) the director's contributions to the Company; (iv) compliance with Nasdaq listing standards; and (v) the Company's Corporate Governance Guidelines. The Board will act on the Governance and Sustainability Committee's recommendation not later than 90 days following the date of the stockholders' meeting at which the election occurred. In making its recommendation against this proposal, the Board reviewed data on the voting standards adopted by other public companies. In 2023, only 2.9% of S&P 500 companies and 0.9% of Russell 3000 companies have a majority vote standard with a mandatory resignation policy.⁽¹⁾ If the Board were to adopt the policy set forth in the proposal, the Company would be in a very small minority of companies that do not provide discretion for the Board to determine the best course of action if an incumbent director fails to receive the requisite majority support for an uncontested re-election. Further, our stockholders have historically, overwhelmingly supported the election of members of our Board. For instance, at our 2023 Annual Meeting, stockholders supported our directors with votes in favor of each of their election equal to or greater than 92.8% of the votes cast, and an average favorable vote of 96.9% of the votes cast. None of our directors has failed to receive the support of a majority of votes cast in any previous elections-thus, the Company has never had a 'holdover director.'"

PIRC Analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition, prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. 5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Politicized De-Banking Proponent's argument: Inspire Investing, LLC, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, colour, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "Financial institutions are essential pillars of the marketplace. On account of their unique and pivotal role in America's economy, many federal and state laws already prohibit them from discriminating against customers. And the UN Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that 'everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion.' These are an important part of protecting every American's right to free speech and free exercise of religion. As shareholders of Regions Financial Corporation, we believe it is essential for the company to provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, colour, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The banking industry is highly regulated, and Regions must comply with numerous federal and state laws, rules, and regulations that prohibit us from discriminating in our business. Regions and our subsidiaries are subject to supervision, regulation, and examination by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Abiding by these laws and regulations in serving our customers, including those regarding fair lending, is a basic expectation of all Regions associates and Directors. This expectation, and the role of legal and regulatory compliance within Regions' core risk management, are set out in Regions' Code of Conduct. The Code of Conduct prohibits discrimination in lending based on race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or any other basis prohibited by law. Regions' Fair and Responsible Lending Policy, Servicemembers and Veterans Affairs Policy, and Americans with Disabilities Act Policy elaborate on all associates' responsibilities regarding fair and responsible banking. Alongside our Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action Policy, the Code of Conduct also articulates our commitment to equal employment opportunity – whether through recruitment, retention, training, or compensation – by prohibiting discrimination against our associates based on legally protected characteristics."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company's policy on discrimination related risks allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company; including stakeholder relationship. However; this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints; including books that some customers may find objectionable; does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. This resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. While there is nothing inherently wrong about the proponents request for political and ideological tolerance; the requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

4. Approve of the 2024 Long Term Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new 2024 long-term incentive plan, in replace of the '2018 plan'. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. The 2024 Plan reserves for issuance a maximum aggregate number of shares of Huntington's common stock equal to the sum of (i) thirty-two million three hundred thousand (32,300,000) shares, plus (ii) the number of shares that are authorized, but not issued or subject to outstanding awards under the 2018 Plan as of the date of approval of the 2024 Plan by the shareholders. Shares available for issuance under the 2024 Plan will be reduced by the number of shares covered by all awards granted under the 2024 Plan, on a one-for-one basis. As of March 1, 2024, after annual award grants were made to certain eligible participants, there remained approximately six million five hundred thousand (6,500,000) shares available for issuance under the 2018 Plan. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

4h. Re-elect Thomas Staggs - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director and chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

SEGRO PLC AGM - 18-04-2024

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

12. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 7.14% of audit fees during the year under review and 10.53% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is 'useful to users'. That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being 'useful for users', a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the 'expectations gap' being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Executive Chair and Chair of the Compensation Committee. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board and Chair of the Compensation Committee should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this.

1.b. Re-elect Earl H. Nemser - Vice Chair (Non Executive)

Vice Chair and Chair of the Nomination Committee. Not considered to be independent due to a tenure of over nine years. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Also, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Furthermore, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

9. Say on Climate

The company are proposing to update the Climate Action Plan (2022). The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. There does not appear to be any individual accountability for the policy, and the policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability. There is evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board and senior management of climate-related issues.

There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.

The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured. However, there does not appear to be any individual accountability for the policy, and the policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability. The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.

The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. 4. Amend Articles: Provide for Exculpation of Officers of the Company

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect Pennsylvania Business Corporation Law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is the Company's state of incorporation, recently added Section 1735 to the Pennsylvania Business Corporation Law to authorize Pennsylvania corporations also to provide exculpation for their officers in addition to their directors. Specifically, Section 1735 extends the opportunity for Pennsylvania corporations to exculpate their officers for personal, monetary liability for breaching their duty of care in certain circumstances. Section 1735 does not allow exculpation from liability for acts or omissions not taken in good faith, acts that involve intentional misconduct or a violation of law, any transaction in which the officer derived an improper personal benefit, or the officer's failure to pay taxes. The provision would only permit exculpation for direct claims brought by stockholders, as opposed to claims brought by or on behalf of the Company. It is considered that officers should be held accountable for their actions and the addition of exculpation provisions for officers may hinder this accountability.

CARRIER GLOBAL CORP AGM - 18-04-2024

1b. Elect David Gitlin - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. The 2024 Equity Incentive Plan authorizes awards in the form of restricted shares, restricted units, performance units, options, cash-based units, performance shares, SARs, deferred units (which may be awarded only to non-employee directors) or other share-based awards, all of which must be evidenced by an award agreement. Awards vest no earlier than the first anniversary of the grant date, subject to limited exceptions. Awards granted under the Plan (other than Cash-Based Units) shall vest no earlier than the first anniversary of the grant date and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. 5. Amend Articles: Limit liability of officers

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances. The provision would only permit exculpation for direct claims brought by stockholders, as opposed to claims brought by or on behalf of the Company. An oppose vote is recommended on the grounds that officers should be held accountable for their actions and the addition of exculpation provisions for officers may hinder this accountability.

In addition to this amendment the proposal includes a handful of amendments, which do not require stockholder approval, including (i) broadening of the administrator's delegation authority to reflect changes in Corporate Law; (ii) clarification of incentive stock option granting period; (iii) elimination of default stock option and stock appreciation right leave of absence treatment; (iv) elimination of default repurchase price and (v) elimination of minimum performance period for cash awards.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

5. Amend Articles: to limit the liability of officers as permitted by law

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances. The provision would only permit exculpation for direct claims brought by stockholders, as opposed to claims brought by or on behalf of the Company. An oppose vote is recommended on the grounds that officers should be held accountable for their actions and the addition of exculpation provisions for officers may hinder this accountability.

Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. Non-Executive Chair of the Board, member of the Audit Committee and Chair of the Nomination Committee. The Chair is not considered to be independent as she is a member of the Henkel family which owns the majority of the company's issued share capital through the Henkel family's share-pooling agreement. Additionally, she is not considered independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Additionally, members and Chairs of Board level committees should be independent.

9. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

TRAVIS PERKINS PLC AGM - 22-04-2024

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The balance of CEO realised pay with financial performance is considered acceptable as the change in CEO total pay over five years is commensurate with the change in TSR over the same period. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 13. Re-appoint KPMG LLP, as auditor of the Company

KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 11.97% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

It is proposed to authorise the Board to grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into Ordinary Shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 1.5 billion in relation to one or more issues of Equity Convertible Notes (ECNs). This authority shall expire at the conclusion of the next Annual General Meeting of the Company, or 30 June 2025 (whichever is earlier).

The use of ECNs are not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. ECNs are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of ECNs on both the ECN price and the share price.

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's new Employee Share Plan. Under the plan all employees of the Company and its subsidiaries (including Executive Directors of the Company) are eligible to participate. Awards under the ESP may be granted within 42 days starting on: i) the day after the announcement of the Company's results for any period, ii) the date on which the ESP (or any amendment to the ESP) is approved by the Company's shareholders, iii) the day on which changes to legislation or regulations affecting share plans are announced, effected or made, the lifting of dealing restrictions which prevented the grant of awards; and iv) the day the Committee determines exceptional circumstances exist which justify the grant of awards. Awards granted to Executive Directors will be subject to any individual limits that apply under the Company's Directors' Remuneration Policy in force from time to time. In any 10 year period, not more than 10% of the issued ordinary share capital of the Company may be issued or committed to be issued in respect of awards under the ESP (including fixed remuneration role-based allowances) and all other employee share plans operated by the Company. When granting an award, the Committee will determine (amongst other things) if vesting will be subject to performance conditions or any other conditions. Vesting, performance and option periods will be determined taking into account legal or regulatory requirements and market practice.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions.

Independent Non-Executive Director. Chair of Nomination Committee. At this time, individual attendance records at board and committee meetings are not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment of the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of the Nomination Committee is responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

Proponent's argument: Mr David Bahnsen request that Truist's Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. It is argued that: "Truist's charitable giving policy excludes faith-based organizations, from churches to other religious organizations. As noted in the 2023 Viewpoint Diversity Score Business Index, "charitable giving policies [ought not] bar nonprofits from receiving support simply because of their religious status." [...] creased transparency in debanking is a critical element of Truist's business purpose—the responsibility to provide value for shareholders must take priority over the kind of activist demands that ultimately jeopardize a business' profit models and erode shareholder trust."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The board argues the following: "Truist is proud of the rich diversity that exists in the backgrounds, experiences, perspectives, and views of its clients and teammates, and we already evaluate and provide public disclosure of the oversight of risks related to discrimination against individuals. As a result, the adoption of the proposal is unnecessary and not in the best interests of Truist or its shareholders. [...] The anti-discrimination efforts associated with our diversity, equity, and inclusion program are already disclosed in existing publicly available reports, such as our Corporate Responsibility Reports. These public reports set forth our commitment to responsible sales and lending practices and the equal and fair treatment of credit applicants and existing borrowers. They also provide an overview of our programs and policies aimed at reinforcing an inclusive culture and building a diverse workforce. [...] As part of this framework, the Nominating and Governance Committee has general oversight of our corporate-responsibility strategies and programs and periodically reviews, recommends changes, considers exceptions, and monitors compliance with Truist's Code of Ethics, and the Compensation and Human Capital Committee oversees our initiatives on teammate well-being and diversity, equity, and inclusion."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship. However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints, including books that some customers may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. Given the diversity that already exists among the organisations available for donations

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ADA. Based on this rating, opposition is recommended.

Chief Executive.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. The Board has proposed the approval of a new American Electric Power System 2024 Long-Term Incentive Plan (the '2024 Plan'). Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. 3. Amend Articles: New Delaware Law Provisions Regarding Officer Exculpation

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

There are concerns with the Plan as the it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. In addition, maximum award limits are excessive.

Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company.

On 22 February 2021, PerkinElmer filed a suit against whistleblowers who accused one of the company's Covid-19 testing labs of improper work. On the same day, California Health and Human Services Agency reported 'significant deficiencies' in PerkinElmer's covid-19 testing lab. On 22 February 2021, CBS reported that a competency tracker from an internal audit failed to reflect that numerous employees processing patient samples had not been approved for competency. Whistleblowers came forward with allegations of significant risks to public health as inconclusive results from Covid-19 tests resulted in false negatives. The Whistleblowers alleged that their concerns were ignored previously by management. Pursuant to this investigation, The Whistleblower Protection Act was passed by a State Senate Committee in April 2022. As such, it is not clear that the Audit Committee has performed adequate risk oversight to prevent this issue from leading to damaging legal action.

Additionally, the Chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

Balance: C - The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ACB.

12. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP (PwC) as external Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 9.09% of audit fees during the year under review and 10.34% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

18. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs

but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. 5. Approve Remuneration Policy

to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 6. Approve the he rules of the Breedon Group Deferred Share Bonus Plan (DSBP)

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Deferred Share Bonus Plan (DSBP) of the Company. Any current or former employee (including an Executive Director) of the Company and any of its subsidiaries will be eligible to participate in the DSB. Awards made under the DSBP will be in the form of a deferred right to receive ordinary shares in the Company ('Shares'). The Committee may grant an award in one of two forms: a) a conditional award, where a participant will receive Shares on the vesting of his/her award; or b) nil or nominal cost options, where a participant can decide when to exercise his/her award over Shares during a limited period of time after it has vested. Awards will normally vest at the end of a two-year period and provided the participant is still an employee or a director in the Company's group. Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to a deferred share plan that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. More specific, the plan has for the executives has a deferral part of one third of the award which is not considered sufficient.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditor to the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 5.56% of audit fees during the year under review and 3.23% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is 'useful to users'. That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being 'useful for users', a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the 'expectations gap' being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. However, the deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is not considered adequate. Half of the bonus should be deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of an non-financial performance criteria. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Crumpler, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "Financial institutions are essential pillars of the marketplace. Because of their unique and pivotal role in America's economy, many federal and state laws already prohibit them from discriminating against customers. The UN Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that "everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion."¹ These are an important part of protecting every American's right to free speech and free exercise of religion. As shareholders of Bank of America, we believe it is essential for the company to provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views. We are concerned with recent evidence of religious and political discrimination against customers by companies in the financial services industry, as seen in recent examples and the 2022 Statement on Debanking and Free Speech."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We have a long-standing commitment to support economic opportunity for all people and communities. That commitment is critical to how we drive Responsible Growth by delivering for our teammates, clients, and shareholders and it is reflected in our policies and practices. Internally, this is core to being a great place to work, and our workforce reflects the communities in which we live and serve. Externally, this is core to our client-driven approach, delivering products and services that meet the diverse needs of our clients, and investing our resources to support our communities and the issues affecting them. We firmly believe that as a financial institution it is our responsibility and part of our daily course of business to help make financial lives better. Our engagement with our employees, clients, vendors, and communities around the world is guided by our commitment to fair, ethical, and responsible business practices, which is embodied in our values and reflected in our Human Rights Statement and our Code of Conduct. Our Human Rights Statement describes the policies and standards we have implemented to respect human rights. Our Code of Conduct makes clear that the company does not tolerate unlawful discrimination or harassment of any kind and that these expectations apply whenever employees are engaged in business on behalf of the company. Promoting nondiscrimination and equality, diversity, and inclusion, both inside our company with employees and outside our company in our communities, are critical components of Responsible Growth and our drive to grow in a sustainable manner. Our ongoing efforts in these areas, our continuous engagement with shareholders, employees, and external stakeholders representing a diverse range of perspectives and thought, and our Board's oversight and leadership of our efforts, demonstrate our commitment to understanding and improving our company's impacts on all stakeholders. Through Responsible Growth, we are making meaningful progress for our customers, communities, and teammates, through ongoing engagement and collaboration with third-party experts on civil rights, nondiscrimination, equality, diversity, and inclusion. These ongoing engagements help drive progress and hold us accountable for our actions."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company's policy on discrimination related risks allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company; including stakeholder relationship. However; this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints; including books that some customers may find objectionable; does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. This resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. The requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

ABRDN PLC AGM - 24-04-2024

3. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditors of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 1.39% of audit fees during the year under review and 1.49% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

5. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentivises equity investors from putting more new funds in the banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. The Board proposes the approval of the rules of the Company's long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Additionally, during the year under review, the company has been found to have violated labour or employment standards and there are concerns over how this can affect both the company's workers and its reputation. On 8 May 2023, it was reported that Goldman Sachs had agreed to pay USD 215 million to settle a gender discrimination lawsuit in which female employees said they were undervalued by and underpaid in comparison to male colleagues. The settlement concluded a long-running case first filed in 2010 before it was due to go to trial. The funds will be split among around 2,800 employees who participated in the class action, primarily in the Company's investment banking and securities units. The plaintiff's lawyers described the settlement as 'one of the most significant employment discrimination class action settlements.' The original claimants had accused Goldman of company-wide policies enabling better pay and promotion policies for men, and alleged that the bank's promotion process had enabled mostly male management to nominate individuals who would contribute to staff appraisals, leading to a 'tap on the shoulder system.'

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of an non-financial performance criteria. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

10. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Financial Statement Assumptions Regarding Climate Change

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board seek an audited report assessing how applying the findings of the Energy Policy Research Foundation and similar studies would affect the assumptions, costs, estimates, and valuations underlying its financial statements, including those related to long-term commodity and carbon prices, remaining asset lives, future asset retirement obligations, capital expenditures and impairments. "Many policymakers, investors and companies have converged on goals including the need to limit global temperature increase to 1.5° C and to reach net zero global greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions by 2050. A 2023 study by the Energy Policy Research Foundation (EPRF) found that net zero advocates have misconstrued the IEA's position on new oil and gas investment, and that the IEA has made questionable assumptions and milestones for NZE about government policies, energy and carbon prices, behavioral changes, economic growth, and technology maturity."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We are committed to supporting our clients with their climate transition strategies. We have long recognized the scale and complexity of the global climate transition, and we have been transparent about the challenges – for example, with respect to data – that have impacted our climate-related reporting. Climate-related risk and considerations are part of our broad risk-oversight and governance structure, including across our Board, senior management, and other business and functional groups. We are focused on managing a broad spectrum of financial and nonfinancial risk across our business, including climate-related risks. We have developed a strategic framework for addressing the risks posed by climate change on our businesses and operations. These risks are incorporated into our firmwide risk taxonomy, which recognizes that climate-related risks may materialize through other risk categories. We categorize climate risk into physical risk and transition risk. Physical risk is the risk that asset values may change as a result of changes in the climate, while transition risk is the risk that asset values may change because of changes in climate policies or changes in the underlying economy as it decarbonizes. We have developed methodologies to assess risks, which serve as fundamental elements for quantifying and integrating climate risk into relevant risk management processes across the firm. While our firm is focused on managing climate-related risk, we also aim to capture climate-related opportunities. Our approach to these opportunities, which are subject to similar business selection, due diligence and risk-return analysis as other commercial opportunities, is aligned with the foundational levers of our Sustainable Finance Strategy, including our work with clients and how we manage our firm."

PIRC analysis: Increased disclosure would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. However, the proposed report is considered to be based on flawed methodology. The proponent seeks a report exclusively focused on short-term costs and benefits for the company, excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy. It is considered that shareholders should instead be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change is not considered to be in shareholders best interests. Additionally, the methodology used by the proponent appears to be flawed, as the link made by the proponent to green washing is seemingly an artificial one. The Company's policy of reducing the number of coal power plants it operates is a material and positive change from an environmental perspective, not a green-washing activity. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Vote Cast: Oppose

Results: For: 0.8, Abstain: 0.8, Oppose/Withhold: 98.4,

12. Shareholder Resolution: Director Resignation Bylaw

Proponent's argument: The New York City Carpenters Pension Fund, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board take the necessary action to adopt a director election resignation bylaw that requires each director nominee to submit an irrevocable conditional resignation to the Company to be effective upon the director's failure to receive the required shareholder majority vote support in an uncontested election. "The Proposal requests that the Board establish a director resignation bylaw to enhance director accountability. The Company has established in its bylaws a majority vote standard for use in an uncontested director election, an election in which the number of nominees equal the number of open board seats. Under applicable state corporate law, a director's term extends until his or her successor is elected and qualified, or until he or she resigns or is removed from office. Therefore, an incumbent director who fails to receive the required vote for election under a majority vote standard continues to serve as a "holdover" director until the next meeting of shareholders. A Company governance policy currently addresses the continued status of an incumbent director who fails to be re-elected by requiring such director to tender his or her resignation for Board consideration. The Proposal's enhancement of the director resignation process will establish shareholder voting in director elections as a more consequential governance right."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Taking into account our current By-Laws, our robust director nomination process and corporate governance best practices, as well as the fact that our shareholders have not expressed any significant concerns regarding our director resignation policy to date, we believe the adoption of this proposal is unnecessary and not in the best interests of our firm or our shareholders. Our governance structure establishes strong protections of shareholder rights and promotes director accountability. For example, in addition to our majority voting bylaw, we have annual election of all directors, no poison pill, a shareholder right to call special meetings, a shareholder right of proxy access, no supermajority vote requirements in our governing documents, a commitment to independent board leadership, individual director evaluations and a robust re-nomination process. As such, we do not believe amending our By-Laws in the unnecessarily prescriptive manner set forth in the proposal will provide any additional value to our shareholders."

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

AMERIPRISE FINANCIAL INC. AGM - 24-04-2024

1a. Elect James M. Cracchiolo - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. 1d. Elect Amy DiGeso - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nomination Committee. Not considered to be independent, as this director is considered to be in a material connection with the current auditor: It is noted she was a managing partner at PwC at an undisclosed date which makes it difficult for the cool-off period to be calculated. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

Furthermore, regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

Additionally, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

2. Amend Articles: Allow for Exculpation of Officers as Permitted by Delaware law

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. The long-term compensation plan has a total duration of five years: it includes three years of evaluation, plus two years in which the executive director or executive officer must remain in the company in order to receive compensation. Specifically, the payment is made in the fourth and fifth year. In the fourth year 30% of the plan is paid and in the fifth year the remaining 70% is paid.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. 1h. Elect Lionel L. Nowell III - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. 11. Re-appoint PwC as Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 5.36% of audit fees during the year under review and 4.76% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

13. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. The vesting scale attached to the LTIP is considered to be overly narrow. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

15. Approval of the Bunzl Long Term Incentive Plan 2024

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan, including rights to share options and performance shares. Participants may receive awards over shares worth up to 175% of their annual salary in any financial year of the Company. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

18. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

EATON CORPORATION PLC AGM - 24-04-2024

1a. Elect Craig Arnold - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. Chief Executive. Acceptable service contract provisions.

As no director has been appointed responsibility for sustainability issues the Chief Executive is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise material risks linked to sustainability which does not meet Camden's guidelines.

Balance: C -The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. 5. Amend the Restated Certificate of Incorporation to provide for executive officer exculpation

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Re-appoint KPMG as the Auditors of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 4.29% of audit fees during the year under review and 3.49% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

PIRC issue: the current auditor has been in place for more than five years and there are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

19. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the amendments of the Company's Performance Share Plan 2014. Under the rules of the Plan it is not possible to grant any further awards after 2 May 2024, accordingly, the Company wishes to extend the life of the Plan so that the Company may continue to grant awards under the Plan for a further ten years following its expiry on 2 May 2024, such ten year period to end on 2 May 2034. The amendments proposed do not promote better alignment with shareholder. Moreover, PIRC does not consider that LTIPs are an effective means of incentivising performance. PRIMARY HEALTH PROPERTIES PLC AGM - 24-04-20241. *Receive the Annual Report

It is noted there is a vote on the dividend policy during the year which provides shareholders with the opportunity to ratify the payment of quarterly dividends. The Company is a Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) which is internally managed.

The company have disclosed a voting policy indicating how they vote on issues relating to investment and investee companies. In addition, it is also noted ESG matters are taken into account in investment decisions which is welcomed.

Total expected costs are instead included in a regulatory document: the Key Information Document (KID). The measure under the term of Ongoing Charges Figure

(OCF) is misleading as it does not include all ongoing charges. The OCF excludes - for example - custodian costs, transaction costs of buying and selling shares, some legal costs, and cost of executing buybacks (which for the UK includes broker fees as well as stamp duty). Neglecting disclosure of the above-mentioned costs, coupled with automatic tabling of buyback authorities, carries the risk of buybacks that may actually destroy value if it is performance and cost that are the underlying causes of investment company discounts. 8. Re-elect Ben Noteboom - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board, Chair of the Nomination Committee and Member of the Remuneration Committee. The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Additionally, It is considered that the members of the remuneration committee are responsible for the company's remuneration policy, and owing to concerns with the company's remuneration policy. This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages.

4. Amend Existing Long Term Incentive Plan

Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. The company is proposing to increase the shares reserved for this plan by 5,000,000 of their common stock.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

3. Re-appoint PwC as Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 5.71% of audit fees during the year under review and 1.90% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

16. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The balance of CEO realised pay with financial performance is not considered acceptable as the change in CEO total pay over five years is not commensurate with the change in TSR over the same period. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

23. Approve Waiver of Existing Awards

The company are proposing a Rule 9 waiver, which will exempt Said Darwazah, Mazen Darwazah and Ali Al-Husry (all Executive Directors and persons acting in concert with them) from the requirement of the City Code that they make an offer for the entire share capital of the company. If the Company were to repurchase from persons other than the concert party all the ordinary shares for which it is seeking authority, their interest would increase from 28.76% to 31.95% of the issued share capital to an undisclosed amount. The share buy back linked to this proposal will mean that the significant shareholder may become a controlling shareholder (30%+) and therefore this requested waiver is not supported, given its impact on the governance of the company by minority shareholders.

BEAZLEY PLC AGM - 25-04-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

There are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported. Camden is recommended to oppose.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

15. Re-appoint EY as Auditors of the Company

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 8.04% of audit fees during the year under review and 10.38% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

PIRC issue: the current auditor has been in place for more than five years and there are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies.

When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. CRH PLC AGM - 25-04-20241A. Elect Richard Boucher - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to an adequate long-term target and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having an adequate long-term target by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

HELIOS TOWERS PLC AGM - 25-04-2024

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as Auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 5.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 3.64% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 4. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

20. Approve new Equity Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, although there is a two year holding period which is welcomed. Performance targets have been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages.

Additionally, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report and has failed to disclose sufficient measures taken to address shareholders' concerns. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 13. Appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor of the Company

PwC proposed as new auditor. Auditor rotation is considered a positive factor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. 20. Approve Drax Group plc 2024 Sharesave Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's Sharesave plan. Under the plan eligible to participate are directors or employees of Participating Companies. Awards granted under the Sharesave will be granted as UK tax-advantaged options to acquire Shares (Options) at a price per Share which is not manifestly less than 80% of the market value of a Share (which will normally be calculated as an average over three consecutive business days) on the date of invitation. If the Option will be satisfied using newly issued Shares, the exercise price per Share must not be less than the nominal value of a Share. Options will be granted to each individual submitting a valid application, so long as they are still an employee or Director of a Participating Company at the time of grant. The Company must normally grant Options within 30 days of the first date used to set the exercise price (or within 42 days if applications are scaled down). Options cannot be granted if they would cause the total number of Shares allocated to exceed 10% of the ordinary share capital of the Company in issue. Options will normally only be exercisable during the six-month period following the maturity (known as the 'bonus date') of the relevant savings contract, after all the monthly contributions have been made. Options may only be exercised to the extent of the repayment made under the relevant savings contract. Options may be exercised in whole or part but only on one occasion. To exercise an Option, a participant must specify the number of Shares in respect of which they wish to exercise the Option and pay the aggregate exercise price for those Shares. The Board will then arrange for the delivery of the Shares to the participant.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions.

1. Approval of the Statutory Financial Statements

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

During the year under review, the company has been accused of misleading advertisement, and while no wrongdoing has yet been identified, there are concerns about the potential reputational and legal implications of this on the company. On 14 September 2023, lawsuits against Johnson & Johnson, Procter & Gamble and other retailers were filed pursuant to a finding by the US Food and Drug Administration which concluded that decongestant ingredient phenylephrine is ineffective. The advisory panel met between 11 and 12 September 2023 to investigate the effects of the ingredient used in decongestants and concluded that it was not effective in uses as an oral decongestant. 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.

The report should be prepared at reasonable cost, omitting proprietary and private information, litigation strategy and legal compliance information, and should be published on the Company's website...Johnson & Johnson ("Company") provides health benefits to employees who suffer gender dysphoria/confusion, and who seek medical, chemical, and/or surgical treatments, offering "coverage for surgery to change the sex of any employee diagnosed with gender identity disorder. Company policy affirms it is possible for dysphoria sufferers to transition to a different sex. Yet an increasing body of scientific evidence shows no benefits result from such treatments. In the United States and Europe, the medical community is increasingly cautious about transitioning therapies and surgeries. Victims report transition treatments and surgeries and harmful. Examples include long-lasting or permanent outcomes like chronic pain, sexual dysfunction, unwanted hair loss or hair gain, menstrual irregularities, urinary problems, and other complications. Rather than resolve health problems, "gender affirming" therapies often exacerbate them."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Johnson & Johnson has been a leader in employee benefits and support for more than a century. Since its founding in 1886, and consistent with Our Credo, Johnson & Johnson has built a legacy of caring for employees, whether it is advocating for better wages during the Great Depression, making childcare easier for employees or supporting employee military service members. That commitment to support of our employees continues today and is reflected in our employee benefits, which remain among the best in our industry. As part of our total rewards philosophy, we offer competitive compensation and benefits to attract and retain top talent. We are committed to fairness and equitable treatment in our compensation and benefits for employees at all levels, and this commitment is evident in the benefit plans we provide to our employees and their families. The proposal seeks a report addressing alleged compensation and health benefit gaps, including with respect to gender dysphoria and detransitioning care, but fails to identify any such gaps. To the contrary, our benefits programs do not draw distinctions on the basis of gender or other protected characteristics and do not exclude de-transitioning care. Further, we routinely poll our employees with respect to our benefits offerings; we receive consistently positive feedback, and this issue has not been identified as a potential concern within our employee base. The purported risks outlined in the supporting statement are theoretical and not relevant to the operations of the Company."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure of goals and policies related to the gender pay gap would be beneficial. However, this proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented regarding gender related healthcare, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters. Without a clear justification, we recommend opposing the Chair of the Board.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board.

The Chair is also chairing another company within the FTSE 350 index. It is considered that a chair cannot effectively represent two corporate cultures. The possibility of having to commit additional time to the role in times of crisis is ever present. Given this, a Chair should focus his attention onto the only one FTSE 350 Company. It is recommended that Camden oppose. Chair. Independent upon appointment.

As no director has been appointed responsibility for sustainability issues the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's Sustainability programme. The Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise material risks linked to sustainability which does not meet Camden's guidelines.

In addition, Ms. Lafferty is Chair of the Remuneration Committee.

10. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as Auditor of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2.86% of audit fees during the year under review and 3.16% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

12. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. 3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. The annual incentive award made during the year under review is not considered to be overly excessive as it amounts to less than 200% of base salary. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Maximum long-term award opportunities are not limited to 200% of base salary, which raises concerns over the potential excessiveness of the remuneration structure. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. In addition, executive compensation is aligned with companies of a similar market cap.

After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. 6. Shareholder Resolution: Political Donations

Proponent's argument: Tara Health Foundation, 47 Kearny Street, San Francisco, CA 94108, which represents that it owns at least 1,840 shares of Pfizer common stock, and a co-filer have notified Pfizer that they will present the following proposal at the 2024 Annual Meeting: Public data collected by OpenSecrets.org show that Pfizer and its corporate PAC rank in the top 1% of political donors.¹ Pfizer policy states that "political contributions are made to support the election of candidates, political parties and committees that support public policies important to the industry."² Pfizer notes these expenditures "are subject to robust internal procedures designed to align these efforts with [its] public policy priorities, applicable law, and patient-centric agenda."³ However, Pfizer's political expenditures appear to be misaligned with the company's stated values and public policy priorities, threatening the company's bottom line if it leads to investor action or consumers taking their business elsewhere. Pfizer listed "Gender Equality" as a Sustainable Development Goal in its ESG report, stating: "We aim to end discrimination against women, ensure equal opportunities for leadership and access to reproductive health." Yet in 2018, Pfizer was a top contributor to leading efforts by 527 groups seeking to strike down the Affordable Care Act – which has made prescription drugs more accessible for millions – and contributes to PhRMA, which donates to numerous organizations opposing congressional efforts to reform drug pricing. The proponents further estimate that since the beginning of the 2020 election cycle, Pfizer and its employee PACs have donated at least $5 million to politicians and political organizations working to weaken women's access to reproductive healthcare. This pattern spending has drawn scrutiny from STAT, Bloomberg News, Huffington Post, The Minnesota Daily, CQ ESG Briefing, Agenda (a Financial Times publication) and Forbes. Proponents believe Pfizer should establish policies and reporting systems that minimize risk to reputation and brand by addressing possible missteps in corporate electioneering and political spending that contrast with its stated healthcare objectives. RESOLVED: Pfizer publish an annual report, at reasonable expense, analyzing the congruency of political, lobbying, and electioneering expenditures during the preceding year against publicly stated company values and policies, including Pfizer's stated goal to "end discrimination against women, ensure equal opportunities for leadership and access to reproductive health." Such a report should identify and explain trends of incongruent expenditures, and state whether the identified incongruencies have or will lead to a change in future expenditures or contributions.

Company's response: The PAC Report is published annually and provides detailed information by recipient and amount of Pfizer PAC and Pfizer Inc. contributions to political committees, corporate contributions in state and local elections and certain contributions to trade associations. Our disclosures fully comply with all federal, state, and local laws, including reporting requirements for our PAC and corporate political contributions. The PAC Report clearly explains Pfizer's rationale for these political expenditures, including the company's support for bipartisan candidates who value Pfizer's purpose "to discover, develop and deliver Breakthroughs that change patients' lives." Additionally, the PAC Report outlines how Pfizer's political expenditures align with our public policy priorities, such as protecting intellectual property, supporting a patient-centric healthcare system that promotes access and innovation, protecting patients from insurance barriers and counterfeit medicines, protecting Medicare Part D and ensuring affordable out-of-pocket costs for patients. To view the PAC Report, see <https://www.pfizer.com/about/programs-policies/political-partnerships>.

PIRC analysis: It is considered that the transparency and completeness of the company's reporting on political donations is acceptable. On this basis the request for an additional report is deemed duplicative.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Other Governance Issue

Proponent's argument: New York City Carpenters Pension Fund, 395 Hudson Street, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10014, which represents that it owns at least 79,400 shares of Pfizer common stock, has notified Pfizer that it will present the following proposal at the 2024 Annual Meeting: "That the shareholders of Pfizer, Inc. ("Company") hereby request that the board of directors take the necessary action to amend its director election resignation bylaw that requires each director nominee to submit an irrevocable conditional resignation to the Company to be effective upon the director's failure to receive the required shareholder majority vote support in an uncontested election. The proposed amended resignation bylaw shall require the Board to accept a tendered resignation absent the finding of a compelling reason or reasons to not accept the resignation. Further, if the Board does not accept a tendered resignation and the director remains as a "holdover" director, the resignation bylaw shall stipulate that should a "holdover" director fail to be re-elected at the next annual election of directors, that director's new tendered resignation will be automatically effective 30 days after the certification of the election vote. The Board shall report the reasons for its actions to accept or reject a tendered resignation in a Form 8-K filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission."

Company's response: "Pfizer's Corporate Governance Principles already contain a robust majority voting standard and director resignation policy consistent with best practices. In an uncontested election, any director nominee who does not receive a majority of votes cast "for" his or her election must tender his or her resignation promptly following the failure to receive the required vote. Within 90 days of the certification of the shareholder vote, Pfizer's Governance & Sustainability Committee (the Committee) must make a recommendation to the Board as to whether the Board should accept the resignation. The Board is required to decide whether to accept the resignation and disclose its decision-making process in a Form 8-K filed with the SEC. Pfizer only nominates candidates for election or re-election to the Board who agree to tender an irrevocable resignation upon failure to receive the required vote, effective upon Board acceptance of such resignation. In considering a Director's resignation, the Committee and the Board may consider any factors they deem relevant, and their decision is subject to their fiduciary duties under Delaware law. Any Director who tenders his or her resignation pursuant to this provision may not participate in the Committee's recommendation or Board action regarding whether to accept the resignation."

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent as owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Also, at the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. For the year under review, annual bonus payouts are considered to be excessive as they represent more than 200% of base salary. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. 4. Approve the Amended and Restated 2014 Omnibus Incentive Plan

It is proposed to amend the Restated 2014 Omnibus Incentive Plan with the continued ability to grant employees equity-based awards following the upcoming expiration of the current plan in September 2024 on the tenth anniversary of its effective date. The plan includes a total plan share reserve of 13.0MM shares of common stock, par value $0.01 per share, which is 2.8% of common stock outstanding as of the record date. As of December 31, 2023, there were 39,532,535 Shares remaining for future grants under the Original Omnibus Plan.

There are concerns with the Plan as it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. In addition, maximum award limits are excessive.

Non-Executive Director and chair of the Governance and Stockholder Relations Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of Governance and Stockholder Relations Committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

1m. Re-elect Richard K. Templeton - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this. Also, as the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is not up for election, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended. Chief Executive. Acceptable service contract provisions. 2. Approve Texas Instruments 2024 Long-Term Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

The minimum performance period prior to vesting is less than three years, which is considered to be short term. Five-year vesting would be preferred. TFI INTERNATIONAL INC AGM - 25-04-2024

1.02. Re-elect Alain Bédar - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. In addition, executive compensation is not aligned with companies of a similar market cap. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The compensation rating is: ADE.

Standard proposal.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. SNAP-ON INCORPORATED AGM - 25-04-2024

1.01. Re-elect David C. Adams - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and chair of the nomination committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

At the company, the Audit Committee does not oversee the whistle-blowing hotline. This may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalated which may mean the issue is concealed. Also, at the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report and has failed to disclose sufficient measures taken to address shareholders' concerns. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

10. Appoint Ernst & Young LLP as the Auditors of the Company.

EY proposed as new auditor. Auditor rotation is considered a positive factor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. 14. Approve the Pearson plc Save for Shares Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's Save for Shares Plan. Under the plan any person who is an employee or Executive Director (who devotes at least 25 hours each week to their duties) of any constituent company and has been employed for a minimum period, or any other director or employee of any constituent company who is nominated by the Board will be eligible to participate in the Plan. The maximum contribution which an optionholder may make under all savings contracts linked to options will be £500 per month, or local currency equivalent (or such other amount as may be permitted from time to time by HMRC). The Board may impose a lower savings limit. In any 10 year period, the Board may not grant awards under the Plan if such grant would cause the number of shares that could be issued under any employees' share scheme adopted by the company or any constituent company to exceed 10% of the company's ordinary share capital at the proposed date of grant. The satisfaction of awards with treasury shares will be treated as an issue of shares for the purpose of the limit for so long as institutional shareholder guidelines recommend this. An optionholder who ceases to be an employee in certain circumstances (including due to injury, disability, redundancy, retirement, following a change in control of the employing company, transfer of the employing business, or following three years after grant date) may exercise an option within the period of six months following such cessation. If an optionholder dies, an option may be exercised by their personal representatives during the period of one year following the date of death or the bonus date, in the event that their death was within six months after the bonus date. If an optionholder ceases to be an employee or director of a constituent company for any other reason, their option will lapse.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions.

15. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as auditors of the company

EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. 3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 1.59% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises and this is not the case.

20. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. In addition, there are concerns over the director's potential time commitments, and the director could not prove full attendance of board and committee meetings during the year.

3. Discharge the Supervisory Board

Standard proposal.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy may exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 9. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises and this is not the case. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Furthermore, The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. As the Chair of the Governance, Environmental and Sustainability Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability.

4. Amend Articles: (Amend Company's Restated Certificate of Incorporation to reflect recent Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation)

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading

shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers

8. Shareholder Resolution: Reduce Greenwashing Risk

Proponent's argument: The National Center For Public Policy Research, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board produce a report analyzing the risks arising from voluntary carbon-reduction commitments. "The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) has taken enforcement actions related to Environmental, Social, Governance (ESG) issues or statements by companies who misrepresent or engage in fraud related to ESG efforts. In 2021, the SEC created the Climate and ESG Task Force in its Division of Enforcement. The focus of the Task Force is "to identify any material gaps or misstatements" in disclosure of climate risks and analyze "compliance issues relating to investment advisers' and funds' ESG strategies. The SEC has proposed to require companies to disclose their Scope 1 and 2 emissions, and to require them to disclose Scope 3 emissions "if material or if the registrant has set a GHG emissions target or goal that includes Scope 3 emissions."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board believes that producing a report analyzing the risks arising from voluntary carbon reduction commitments as requested by the proponent is unnecessary and not an effective use of the Company's resources because the Board and various committees already exercise oversight of the evaluation of the risks and benefits of the Company's carbon reduction initiatives to the Company and its stakeholders. The Company maintains a robust process for identifying, assessing, overseeing, and taking action with respect to material risks facing the Company. As described under the "Board Oversight of Enterprise Risk" section of this Proxy Statement, Kellanova's risk assessment process is global in nature and has been developed to identify and assess the Company's current and emerging risks, including the nature, probability and implications of the risk, as well as to identify steps to mitigate and manage each risk. Kellanova has disclosed its commitment to setting near- and long-term company-wide emission reductions in line with science-based net-zero standards with the Science Based Targets initiative. In connection with the commitments undertaken by Kellanova under its Better Days™ Promise, Kellanova publicly discloses the Company's approach to meet goals and information regarding the methodologies for tracking these metrics. Further, the Company has engaged with a third-party expert to undertake a due diligence process and the development of our decarbonization commitments and a modelling tool in connection with our decarbonization efforts. Our greenhouse gas emissions (Scopes 1, 2 and 3) and energy consumption have been independently verified by Apex Companies. The Company maintains a robust process for identifying, assessing, overseeing, and taking action with respect to material risks facing the Company. As described under the "Board Oversight of Enterprise Risk" section of this Proxy Statement, Kellanova's risk assessment process is global in nature and has been developed to identify and assess the Company's current and emerging risks, including the nature, probability and implications of the risk, as well as to identify steps to mitigate and manage each risk. Specifically, the Board, directly and through its Committees, uses the Enterprise Risk Management (or ERM) process to assist in fulfilling its oversight of the Company's risks."

PIRC analysis: Increased disclosure would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. However, the proposed report is considered to be based on flawed methodology. The proponent seeks a report exclusively focused on short-term costs and benefits for the company, excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy. It is considered that shareholders should instead be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change is not considered to be in shareholders best interests. Additionally, the methodology used by the proponent appears to be flawed, as the link made by the proponent to green washing is seemingly an artificial one. The Company's policy of reducing the number of coal power plants it operates is a material and positive change from an environmental perspective, not a green-washing activity.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. 4. Amend Articles: Exculpation of certain officers

The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VI of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

4. Approve Amendment Long Term Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval the amendment of the long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

6. Advisory resolution to accept the company's climate action plan

The board is seeking approval of the company's climate action plan. The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. The chair is indicated as being responsible for oversight of the climate strategy and members of the senior management have accrued significant experience in climate-related issues within the sector of the company.

There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.

The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.

The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.

However, There is no evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board or senior management of climate-related issues, most relevantly decarbonization.

The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.

3. Approve the Company's Incentive Share Purchase Plan

It is proposed to approve a stock option plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions.

There seem to be no performance criteria besides employment and tenure: The company is recommending to increase the number of common shares reserved for issuance under the Incentive Share Purchase Plan by 4,000,000 common shares from the current 9,600,000 common shares to 13,600,000 common shares. As at March 15, 2024, 9,228,309 common shares had been issued under the Incentive Share Purchase Plan, representing 1.85% of the 498,940,643 common shares issued and outstanding as of March 15, 2024. Accordingly, if the increase is approved, the number of common shares available for future common share issuance will be 4,371,691, representing 0.88% of the 498,940,643 common shares issued and outstanding as of March 15, 2024. The purpose of the incentive share purchase plan is to encourage equity participation in Agnico Eagle Mines Limited by its directors, officers and employees through the purchase of common shares of Agnico Eagle Mines Limited.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clearly performance criteria and conditions.

BELLEVUE HEALTHCARE TRUST PLC AGM - 26-04-2024

9. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as auditors to the Company

EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. The vesting scale attached to the LTIP is considered to be overly narrow. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder.

The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The balance of CEO realised pay with financial performance is not considered acceptable as the change in CEO total pay over five years is not commensurate with the change in TSR over the same period. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Ocado Performance Share Plan 2024. Under the plan eligible to participate are any employee of the Company's group ("Group"), including the Company's executive directors. Awards will not normally be granted to a participant under the Plan over Shares with a market value (as determined by the Committee) in excess of 600% of salary in respect of any financial year of the Company. The vesting of Awards may (and, in the case of an Award to an Executive Director other than a Recruitment Award, will to the extent required by the Company's shareholder approved Directors' Remuneration Policy) be subject to the satisfaction of performance conditions. The Committee will determine the period over which any performance conditions are assessed. Any performance condition may be amended in accordance with its terms or if anything happens which causes the Committee to consider it appropriate to amend the performance condition, provided that the Committee considers that any amended performance condition would not be materially less or more challenging to satisfy. Awards may be satisfied using new issue Shares, treasury Shares or Shares purchased in the market. The number of Shares which may be issued to satisfy awards granted in any ten-year period under the Plan and any other employee share plan adopted by the Company may not exceed 10% of the issued ordinary share capital of the Company from time to time. The Committee may grant Awards as: (i) conditional Awards of Shares; (ii) nil or nominal-cost options over Shares; or (iii) forfeitable Awards of Shares. No payment is required for the grant of an Award. Awards structured as nil or nominal-cost options will normally be exercisable from the point of vesting (or, where an Award is subject to a holding period, the end of that holding period) until the tenth anniversary of the grant date.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries, LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. 8. Authorise Share Repurchase

It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. The authority is limited to 10% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders and no clear justification was provided by the Board.

Bundled proposal to elect directors and approve their compensation. At this time, neither candidates nor their proposed compensation have been disclosed. It is proposed to extend the insurance cover to the members of the governing bodies of all Group companies. In addition, the insurance does not explicitly exclude that it would cover also liabilities arising from fraudulent conduct, and fines handed down by the supervisory authorities. On this basis, shareholders would pay wilful violations and fraudulent conduct led by directors and executives.

GENUINE PARTS COMPANY AGM - 29-04-2024

1.03. Elect Paul D. Donahue - Chair & Chief Executive

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. 1.05. Elect P. Russell Hardin - Non-Executive Director Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nomination and ESG Committee. Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines. Additionally, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

Chair of the Sustainability Committee. The Chair of the Sustainability Committee is accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and there are serious concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice. The Company's sustainability policies, practice and disclosure fall short of Camden guidelines.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ACB. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

3. Approval of Amendment to the 2015 Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the amendment of their 2015 long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria:

The Company are asking shareholders to approve an amendment to the Genuine Parts Company Amended and Restated 2015 Incentive Plan (the '2015 Plan') to extend its term for an additional ten-year period. As of February 12, 2024, there were 6,000,000 shares of common stock reserved and available for future awards under the 2015 Plan (after giving effect to the February 12, 2024, plan amendments which reduced the number of shares available for future awards from 6,591,440 to 6,000,000). As of such date, there were approximately 1,118,071 shares of common stock subject to outstanding awards under the 2015 Plan, and approximately 52,750 shares of common stock subject to outstanding awards under the Genuine Parts Company 2006 Long-Term Incentive Plan.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

ANGLO AMERICAN PLC AGM - 30-04-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified.

There are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. Camden is recommended to oppose.

13. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 3.70% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.74% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

15. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. The compensation rating is: ADE. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Amend Articles: (Limit Liability of Certain Officers as Permitted by Law)

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report and has failed to disclose sufficient measures taken to address shareholders' concerns. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. Total combined variable reward paid during the year is considered excessive, exceeding the 200% recommended threshold. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. 9. Approve Climate Roadmap 2040

Governance

There does not appear to be any individual accountability for the policy, and the policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability.

The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.

The company has committed to net zero by 2050 but this commitment only extends to part of its Scope 1, Scope 2 and Scope 3 emissions. This is considered to be inconsistent with an adequate commitment to a full energy transition, as shareholders are unable to make an informed assessment on the material efforts to reduce emissions and increase the resilience of the company in the long term.

There is no evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board or senior management of climate-related issues, most relevantly decarbonization.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group

In addition, the insurance does not explicitly exclude that it would cover also liabilities arising from fraudulent conduct, and fines handed down by the supervisory authorities. The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit Committee. On 25 August 2023, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) charged the company USD 35 million for overcharging more than 10,900 advisory accounts in excess of USD 26.8 million. Wells Fargo also paid affected parties USD 40 million including interest as compensation. The SEC reported in a press release that 'certain financial advisers from Wells Fargo and its predecessor firms agreed to reduce the firms' standard, pre-set advisory fees for certain clients and made handwritten or typed changes on the clients' investment advisory agreements that reflected the reduced fees at the time their accounts were opened.' However, it was found by the SEC that the reduced fees were not entered into the billing systems when establishing accounts. This resulted in certain clients being overcharged and inaccurate data in its billing system.

During the year under review, litigation against the company has reached an unfavourable verdict and there are concerns over how this could financially or reputationally impact the company. The banks were accused of colluding to raise the rates on over 12,000 VRDOs (Variable-rate demand obligations) between 2008 and 2016. The cases brought by cities led by Philadelphia, Baltimore and San Diego accused the banks of reducing available funding for infrastructure and public sector services, resulting in damages amounting to billions of dollars.

4. Amend Articles: Approval of an amendment to the Restated Certificate of Incorporation to opt out of Delaware General Corporation Law Section 203

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

13. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Politicized De-Banking

Proponent's argument: American Conservative Values ETF, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "Financial institutions are essential pillars of the marketplace. On account of their unique and pivotal role in America's economy, many federal and state laws already prohibit them from discriminating against customers. And the UN Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion. These are an important part of protecting every American's right to free speech and free exercise of religion. As shareholders of Wells Fargo, we believe it is essential for the company to provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views. We are concerned with recent evidence of religious and political discrimination against customers by companies in the financial services industry, as seen in recent examples and the 2022 Statement on Debanking and Free Speech."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our Board, directly and through its committees, oversees our culture and ethics, social and public responsibility, and anti-discrimination matters. For certain matters, the Board receives reporting directly, rather than through its committees. The HRC, which is comprised entirely of members with human capital management skills and expertise, oversees DE&I matters and periodically reviews our Code of Conduct as well as management's efforts to foster responsible conduct and ethical behaviour and decision-making throughout Wells Fargo. The CRC oversees significant strategies, policies, and programs on social and public responsibility matters and monitors the state of Wells Fargo's relationships and enterprise reputation with external stakeholders on such matters. All of the members of the CRC have experience in environmental and social matters as well as government and public policy matters. We engaged with the proponent after receipt of this proposal. We are committed to maintaining the trust of our customers and following the laws, rules, and regulations that apply to our business, including with respect to the avoidance of discrimination based on protected characteristics. The Code of Conduct, which is publicly available on our website, provides employees with principles designed to help guide their conduct with clients, customers, and others who conduct business with Wells Fargo. The Code of Conduct strictly prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, ethnicity, age, gender, or other protected characteristics. The Code of Conduct also reinforces our respect for the right to participate in the political process and to support the candidates, parties, or initiatives of one's choice. The Code of Conduct applies to all employees, including executive officers, and in some cases, our Board."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company's policy on discrimination related risks allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company; including stakeholder relationship. However; this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints; including books that some customers may find objectionable; does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. This resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. The requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Director Election Resignation Bylaw

Proponent's argument: That the shareholders of Citigroup Inc. ("Company") hereby request that the board of directors take the necessary action to amend its director election resignation bylaw that requires each director nominee to submit an irrevocable conditional resignation to the Company to be effective upon the director's failure to receive the required shareholder majority vote support in an uncontested election. The proposed amended resignation bylaw shall require the Board to accept a tendered resignation absent the finding of a compelling reason or reasons to not accept the resignation. Further, if the Board does not accept a tendered resignation and the director remains as a "holdover" director, the resignation bylaw shall stipulate that should a "holdover" director fail to be re-elected at the next annual election of directors, that director's new tendered resignation will be automatically effective 30 days after the certification of the election vote. The Board shall report the reasons for its actions to accept or reject a tendered resignation in a Form 8-K filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The Proposal requests that the Board amend its director resignation bylaw to enhance director accountability. The Company has established in its bylaws a majority vote standard for use in an uncontested director election, an election in which the number of nominees equal the number of open board seats. Under applicable state corporate law, a director's term extends until his or her successor is elected and qualified, or until he or she resigns or is removed from office. Therefore, an incumbent director who fails to receive the required vote for election under a majority vote standard continues to serve as a "holdover" director until the next meeting of shareholders. A Company resignation bylaw currently addresses the continued status of an incumbent director who fails to be re-elected by requiring such director to tender his or her resignation for Board consideration.

Company's response: The amendments to the By-Laws contemplated by the Proposal would require that, in situations where the Board finds compelling reasons not to accept a director's tendered resignation and the director thus continues as a "holdover" director, if such director fails to receive a majority of the votes cast at the next annual meeting of stockholders, such director's resignation "will be automatically effective 30 days after the certification of the election vote." The Board carefully considered the Director Resignation By-Law Amendment Proposal and concluded, for the reasons noted below, that a blanket prohibition on nominating a holdover director if he or she fails to secure a majority vote would not be in the best interests of the Company and our stockholders. In 2006, Citi adopted a majority vote standard for uncontested Director elections and amended our By-Laws to include a director resignation requirement. The director resignation requirement provides that a nominee in an uncontested election who is not elected by a majority vote shall offer to resign from his or her position as a Director. Unless the Board decides to reject the offer or to postpone the effective date, the resignation becomes effective 60 days after the date of the election. Under the By-Laws, if the Board rejects the Director's resignation, it must publicly state its reasons for doing so. The Board continues to believe that having a director resignation provision in its By-Laws is a best practice that ensures the appropriate level of continuity for the Board, while giving the Board the authority to exercise its fiduciary duties in determining whether or not to accept a holdover director's resignation. Each member of the Board has fiduciary duties to the Company's stockholders, including ensuring that the Board members collectively possess skill sets that are directly relevant to the Company's business and strategic objectives at any given time.

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Report to Shareholders on Risks Created by the Company's Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Efforts

Proponent's argument: Shareholders ask that the board commission and publish a report on (1) whether the Company engages in any practices directly or indirectly associated with diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives that may create risks of discriminating against individuals who might sue the Company (including employees, suppliers, contractors, and retained professionals) for illegal discrimination on the basis of protected categories like race and sex, and (2) the potential costs of such discrimination to the business. In just the past year, a corporation was successfully sued for a single case of discrimination against a white employee resulting in an award of more than $25 million. The risk of being sued for such discrimination appears only to be rising.¹⁰ With over 230,000 employees,¹¹ Citi likely has at least 170,000 employees who are potentially the victims of this type of illegal discrimination because they are white, Asian, male, or straight.¹² Accordingly, even if only 10 percent of such employees were to file suit, and only 10 percent of those prove successful, the cost to the company could exceed $42 billion. And while racial equity audits can cost up to $4 million, this report should cost much less, as it need review only the potentially discriminatory programs, unless Citi has established so many such programs that its liability for this discrimination must be expected to be much higher.

Company's response: The Proposal requests that Citi's Board "commission and publish a report on (1) whether the Company engages in any practices directly or indirectly associated with diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives that may create risks of discriminating against individuals who might sue the Company (including employees, suppliers, contractors, and retained professionals) for illegal discrimination on the basis of protected categories like race and sex, and (2) the potential costs of such discrimination to the business." The Proposal asserts that certain of Citi's DEI programs result in illegal racial discrimination, pointing to, for example, Citi's career development programs that allegedly "facially discriminate on the basis of race/sex/gender, with straight White males apparently not eligible for any of these resource allocations" and Citi's investment of more than $1 billion in strategic initiatives that are "apparently intended to allocate Citi resources on the basis of race in order to 'help close the racial wealth gap.'" The Supporting Statement further claims that Citi's DEI programs could result in significant legal liability from employees "who are potentially the victims of . . . illegal discrimination because they are white, Asian, male, or straight." Citi disagrees with the Proposal's assertion that its diversity, equity and inclusion programs are unlawful. Citi has a long-standing commitment to following equal employment opportunity principles and to complying with the full range of laws regarding fair employment practices and non-discrimination. Citi fully understands its obligation to provide equal employment opportunities and to not engage in unlawful conduct in establishing and implementing diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives. Citi continues to review and refine those policies and practices in light of the evolving legal landscape and business needs.

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives.

Proponent's argument: Financial institutions are essential pillars of the marketplace. The UN Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that "everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, and religion." These guarantees are an important part of protecting every American's freedom of speech and free exercise of religion. As shareholders of Citigroup, we believe the company must provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views. We are concerned with recent evidence of religious and political discrimination against customers by companies in the financial services industry, as seen in recent examples² and the 2022 Statement on Debanking and Free Speech.³ Citigroup's charitable giving policy⁴ excludes religious organizations.

Citi fully understands its obligation to provide equal employment opportunities and to not engage in unlawful conduct in establishing and implementing diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives. The proponent mischaracterizes Citi's commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion by suggesting that its diversity, equity and inclusion programs are unlawful. Citi's policies are designed to emphasize that our personnel are expected to respect the beliefs, identity and values of others. Citi prohibits discrimination and harassment against its employees in all forms, regardless of whether or not individual protections are legally mandated in the countries".

It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. These resolutions will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

GRUPO MEXICO SAB DE CV AGM - 30-04-2024

1. Approve Financial Statements

At this time, the financial statements have not been made available. Although not uncommon in this market, it is considered a serious reporting omission. Additionally, despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Report on Compliance with Fiscal Obligations

The report was not made available sufficiently before the meeting. This is considered a serious reporting omission. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Authorise Share Repurchase

It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. 5. Discharge the Board of Directors, Executive Chair and Board Committees

There is insufficient disclosure of meeting materials in a timely manner to provide an informed vote. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

6. Appoint the Auditors

Deloitte proposed. An adequate break-down of the nature of non-audit fees is not provided, which makes the assessment of auditor's independence based on the non-audit fee impossible. The date of appointment of the auditor is not disclosed, meaning that there are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Vote Cast: Oppose

7. Elect Board: Slate Election

Proposal to renew the Board with a bundled election. Although slate elections are not considered to be best practice, they are common in this market. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board after the meeting as resulting from this slate of candidates.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

Vote Cast: Oppose

9. Approve Fees Payable to the Board of Directors and Committees

No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice, the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting. Although this is a common practice for a standard item in this market, support will not be suggested for resolutions concerning remuneration when sufficient information has not been made available for shareholders in sufficient time prior to the meeting, as such practice prevents shareholders from reaching an informed decision. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

ROBERT WALTERS PLC AGM - 30-04-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

There are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported. Camden is recommended to oppose.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

Balance: C - The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

2. Restricted Stock and Deferred Compensation Plan for Non-Employee Directors

The Company is seeking shareholder approval of the Amended and Restated PACCAR Inc Restricted Stock and Deferred Compensation Plan for Non-Employee Directors (the Plan). The Plan was approved by the stockholders in 2014. As of December 31, 2023, there are 945,936 shares of PACCAR common stock available for new awards of the 1,645,312 shares previously authorized for issuance under the Plan. Each non-employee director receives a grant of restricted stock or restricted stock units annually in addition to their cash compensation. There are currently nine non-employee directors. The number of shares or units granted equals the number of shares of common stock that the "Base Amount" (USD 165,000) could have purchased at the Fair Market Value on the grant date, however this is at the discretion of the committee.

There are the following concerns with this Plan: In the event of a change in control all restricted stock will become unrestricted; the Board of Directors or the Nominating and Governance Committee may amend or terminate the Plan at any time; and, this plan has only time-based vesting and no performance criteria attached. IMPERIAL OIL LIMITED AGM - 30-04-2024

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. 1g.. Elect Andrew N. Liveris - Non-Executive Director

Chair of the Directors and Corporate Governance Committee which is responsible for matters of Nomination and Sustainability policy for the Company. Not considered to be independent as he has served on the Board for over nine years. As the Chair of the Corporate Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given that the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability, opposition is recommended. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Corporate Governance Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Additionally, at this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. 5.. Shareholder Resolution: Communist China Audit

Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board commission and publish a third-party review within the next year (at reasonable cost, omitting proprietary information) of whether the Company's activities and expenditures related to doing business in China align with its ESG commitments, including its Human Rights Statement of Principles. "BM's 2022 ESG report touts its environmental and ethical impacts. It advertises the Company's goals of reducing pollution and reaching net-zero greenhouse gas emissions by 2030, as well as policies and practices that it says prioritize qualities such as ethics and accountability. The ESG report also highlights the Company's commitment to human rights and its Human Rights Statement of Principles. But nothing about doing business in China, which is controlled by the dictatorial and oppressive Chinese Communist Party (CCP), does anything to further these ideals. Furthermore, China has an abhorrent human rights record. Its abuses against the Uyghurs and other ethnic minorities in Xinjiang has sparked outrage, as evidence of forced labor programs, forced sterilizations, and torture at the hands of the CCP are undeniable."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "IBM adheres to the law across all of the countries where we do business, including government controls on the export and use of certain technologies. Further, IBM complies with all laws related to human rights and forced labor, including the US Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act and similar rules proposed by the European Commission. Globally, IBM practices the highest level of social, environmental and ethical responsibility in our global supply chains and we expect the same level of due diligence from our suppliers. The company was a founding member of the Responsible Business Alliance (RBA), a nonprofit industry group that helps its members continuously develop and execute the highest level of ethical standards in global supply chains. IBM requires our first-tier suppliers of hardware, software, and services to adhere to the RBA Code of Conduct, which contains provisions on labor, health and safety, environmental requirements, ethics, and management systems. We apply the same requirement across IBM's own operations. And our suppliers must establish goals, disclose results, cascade IBM's requirements to their next-tier suppliers, and more. In conclusion, we see no conflict between IBM's business activities in China, which accounts for only a small fraction of IBM's total global revenue, and our commitments to corporate responsibility."

PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the involvement with businesses in China as a human rights violator appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's involvement on human rights controversial activities globally and focuses on geopolitical threats with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views on international relations be represented within the company's global activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of global operations conducted fairly, and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues to avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation. A report on the human rights impact of the company's operations that may be potentially complicit in China's human rights abuses would be in shareholders' interests, but such a proposal does not seem to be in the interest of the proponent. Rather, this proposal appears to use human rights as an argument to ask the company to withdraw from doing business with China, in a view that considered it to be a geopolitical threat to the US and without actual interest in human rights in that country. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

ROTORK PLC AGM - 30-04-2024

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. In addition, executive compensation is aligned with companies of a similar market cap. The compensation rating is: BCD.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Approve 2024 Equity Incentive Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

13. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditors of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 12.24% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.61% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. For the year under review, annual bonus payouts are considered to be excessive as they represent more than 200% of base salary. 3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

STV GROUP PLC AGM - 01-05-20242. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. The LTIP does not utilise non-financial metrics as a means of assessing performance. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration Policy. However, it is clear from Company reporting that sufficient steps have been taken in order to address the concerns raised. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. Awards made under all schemes during the year are not considered excessive as they do not exceed 200% of base salary. The CEO's salary is below the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

14. Amend Existing Long Term Incentive Plan

The STV Group Plc Long Term Incentive Plan (the 'LTIP') provides a flexible vehicle to facilitate the recruitment, retention and incentivisation of the Company's Executive Directors and senior leaders within the shareholder-approved Directors' Remuneration Policy. Certain changes are being proposed to the LTIP to align it with evolving practice: i) Imposition of a limit of 5% of share capital over 10 years on the number of shares that can be made available for the Company's executive share plans (in addition to the 10% over 10 years limit that applies to all its plans) ii) Allowing the extent to which awards normally vest to be reduced in exceptional circumstances, iii) Widening the circumstances in which benefits under the LTIP may be subject to forfeiture, additional conditions or repayment for up to 5 years after their grant, iv) Provision for awards held by individuals who cease employment to have their vesting conditional upon not taking up alternative employment and v) Provision for the grant of awards in connection with recruitment (typically to compensate for awards from previous employment that will be forfeited) that will not be subject to the normal plan limits.

PIRC does not consider that LTIPs are an effective means of incentivising performance. These schemes are not considered to be properly long term and are subject to manipulation due to their discretionary nature. Opposition is recommended.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of an non-financial performance criteria. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ADA.

4. Amend Articles: Delaware law provisions

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of Juniper, is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation]. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significant higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuading shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks created by the Company's Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Efforts

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research ask that the board commission and publish a report on (1) whether the Company engages in any practices directly or indirectly associated with diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives that may create risks of discriminating illegally on bases such as race and sex, thereby potentially triggering justice-seeking responses from stakeholders of the company (including employees, suppliers, contractors, and retained professionals), and (2) the potential costs of such discrimination to the business. Shareholders argue the following: "In just the past year, a corporation was successfully sued for a single case of discrimination against a white employee resulting in an award of more than USD 25 million. The risk of being sued for such discrimination appears only to be rising. With over 80,000 employees, MGM likely has at least 60,000 employees who are potentially the victims of this type of illegal discrimination because they are white, Asian, male, or straight. [...] And while racial equity audits can cost up to $4 million, this report should cost much less, as it need review only the potentially discriminatory programs, unless MGM has established so many such programs that its liability for this discrimination must be expected to be much higher."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The board argues the following: "The Board has carefully considered the terms of this shareholder proposal and has determined that preparing the requested report would be duplicative and unnecessary and is therefore not in the best interests of our shareholders. The Board oversees, and is committed to, the Company's strategy, framework and policies for diversity, equity and inclusion that are legally compliant and non-discriminatory. [...] Management reviews our diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives regularly, to ensure compliance with applicable legal requirements, and in light of changing industry practices. These reviews include initiatives focused on supplier diversity, as well as on diversity, equity and inclusion practices more broadly. As described above, these programs are overseen at the Board-level. As a result, the proponent's requested review would be duplicative and unnecessary. The Company's diversity, equity and inclusion programs have been well-recognized for years, garnering many prestigious awards that serve to enhance our reputation with our customers, vendors, employees and other stakeholders, and bolster our competitive advantage."

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives.

2. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 11.11% of audit fees during the year under review and 11.54% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

CENOVUS ENERGY INC AGM - 01-05-20242.04. *Elect James D. Girgulis - Non-Executive Director

Non-executive Director and Member of the Nomination Committee. Not considered independent as the director has a relationship with the Company, which is considered material. The Director was previously an Executive at Husky Energy, which was acquired by the Company in 2021.

This director is a member of the nomination committee. It is important that this committee be exclusively comprised of independent directors in order to ensure an equitable and unprejudiced appointment process. Does not meet Camden guidelines.

2.05. Elect Jane E. Kinney - Non-Executive Director

Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit Committee. At the company, the Audit Committee does not oversee the whistle-blowing hotline. This may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalated which may mean the issue is concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

2.10. Elect Claude Mongeau - Senior Independent Director

Lead Independent Director and Chair of the Nomination Committee. Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

This director is Chair of the Nomination Committee and less than 33% of the Board are women which does not meet Camden guidelines.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2.11. Elect Alexander J. Pourbaix - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The annual incentive award made during the year under review is not considered to be overly excessive as it amounts to less than 200% of base salary. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Maximum long-term award opportunities are not limited to 200% of base salary, which raises concerns over the potential excessiveness of the remuneration structure. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice.

It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Approve Shareholder Rights Plan

It is proposed to approve the 2024 Census Shareholder Rights Plan. This authority is considered to be counter to the best interests of shareholders. The poison pill enables management to offer warrants to shareholders during a period of public offer thus implying a threat of dilution to potential acquirers of the company. While this may cause potential acquirers to negotiate with the Board, it may also potentially prevent hostile takeovers and entrench management.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Director Election Resignation Bylaw

Proponent's argument: Gary Perinar has submitted the following proposal: That the shareholders of PepsiCo, Inc. ("Company") hereby request that the board of directors take the necessary action to adopt a director election resignation bylaw that requires each director nominee to submit an irrevocable conditional resignation to the Company to be effective upon the director's failure to receive the required shareholder majority vote support in an uncontested election. "The proposed resignation bylaw shall require the Board to accept a tendered resignation absent the finding of a compelling reason or reasons to not accept the resignation. Further, if the Board does not accept a tendered resignation and the director remains as a "holdover" director, the resignation bylaw shall stipulate that should a "holdover" director fail to be re-elected at the next annual election of directors, that director's new tendered resignation will be automatically effective 30 days after the certification of the election vote. The Board shall report the reasons for its actions to accept or reject a tendered resignation in a Form 8-K filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. The Proposal requests that the Board establish a director resignation bylaw to enhance director accountability. The Company has established in its bylaws a majority vote standard for use in an uncontested director election, an election in which the number of nominees equal the number of open board seats. A Company governance policy currently addresses the continued status of an incumbent director who fails to be re-elected by requiring such director to tender his or her resignation for Board consideration. The new director resignation bylaw will set a more demanding standard of review for addressing director resignations than that contained in the Company's resignation governance policy."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The Board believes the existing director resignation policy contained in PepsiCo's Corporate Governance Guidelines already provides meaningful consequences when a director fails to receive a majority vote and effectively addresses the underlying concerns of the proposal. Since PepsiCo first adopted its current majority vote and director resignation policy, no director has failed to receive support from a majority of the votes cast. Indeed, as a testament to the caliber of our director slate and the Board's careful consideration of its nominees, our shareholders elected all members of our Board of Directors by votes greater than 91% of the votes cast in the last ten years. PepsiCo's current director resignation policy already provides for an effective process for securing and acting on an irrevocable resignation offer from a director who fails to receive a majority shareholder vote. The Board values the input of our shareholders and believes that it is essential for shareholders to have a critical role in the election of directors. As described in the "Director Election Requirements and Majority-Vote Policy" section of this Proxy Statement on page 12, all members of PepsiCo's Board are elected annually by our shareholders by a majority of the votes cast in an uncontested election, meaning that the number of votes cast "for" a director must exceed the number of votes cast "against" that director in order to elect the director to the Board. If a director nominee in an uncontested election who is an incumbent director receives more votes "against" than votes "for" election, our director resignation policy set forth in PepsiCo's Corporate Governance Guidelines provides that he or she must make an irrevocable resignation offer to the Board."

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. As such; an oppose vote is recommended. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

11. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks Created by the Company's Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Efforts

Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research has submitted the following proposal: Report to Shareholders on Risks Created by the Company's Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Efforts. "Shareholders ask that the board commission and publish a report on (1) whether the Company engages in any practices associated with diversity, equity, and inclusion initiatives that may create risks of discriminating illegally on bases such as race and sex, thereby potentially triggering justice-seeking responses from stakeholders of the company (including employees, suppliers, contractors, and retained professionals), and (2) the potential costs of such discrimination to the business. In just the past year, a corporation was successfully sued for a single case of discrimination against a white employee resulting in an award of more than $25 million. The risk of being sued for such discrimination appears only to be rising. With over 300,000 employees, 10 PepsiCo likely has at least 225,000 employees who are potentially the victims of this type of illegal discrimination because they are white, Asian, male, or straight. Accordingly, even if only 10 percent of such employees were to file suit, and only 10 percent of those prove successful, the cost to the company could exceed USD 56 billion.

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "As it relates to our U.S.-focused DEI efforts, we execute this strategy in a manner that is consistent with our status as an Equal Employment Opportunity Employer and it is our Company policy to achieve our DEI goals in a manner consistent with applicable laws. To maintain transparency and accountability, we voluntarily report on our DEI strategies and metrics, including but not limited to publicly disclosing our annual U.S. Consolidated EEO-1 report as submitted to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. As one of the largest food and beverage companies in the world, PepsiCo does business in hundreds of markets, each with their own culture, character, and history. To compete on this scale, we must understand the unique needs of local consumers and put them at the center of everything we do, from our products and campaigns to our partnerships and innovations. That's why Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion is a core component of how we work, giving us a competitive advantage and serving as the foundation of a winning mentality within our company. This includes embracing the diversity of all our associates, while we strive to create an inclusive and equitable environment within our organization, across our value chain, and in the communities we serve. We believe that is not only the right thing to do for our society, but also critical to the long-term success of our business."

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. A vote against the resolution is recommended. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

3. Approve New 2024 Equity Plan

The Board proposes to approve the new 2024 Equity Plan. Subject to adjustments as provided in the 2024 Plan, the aggregate number of shares of Common Stock available for all awards under the 2024 Plan is 240,000,000 plus any shares of Common Stock that are returned to the 2024 Plan share reserve under its provisions allowing shares to be reused for new grants described below under the 'Reuse of Shares' heading. The shares of Common Stock issuable under the 2024 Plan may be drawn from shares of our authorized but unissued Common Stock or authorized and issued shares of Common Stock reacquired and held as treasury shares or a combination thereof.

The 2024 Plan allows shares withheld or delivered to satisfy tax withholding requirements on Full-Value Awards (but not stock options or SARs) to be added back to the share reserve. In addition, the 2024 Plan allows that Full-Value Awards under the 2014 Plan and the 2024 Plan that are cancelled, terminate, expire, are forfeited or lapse for any reason, including by reason of failure to meet time-based vesting requirements or to achieve performance goals after the Effective Date, will be added back to the 2024 Plan share reserve. Shares subject to awards under the 2014 Plan or the 2024 Plan that are settled in cash will be added back to the 2024 Plan share reserve. Shares tendered or withheld to cover an exercise price of a stock option, shares not issued in connection with a stock settlement of a SAR, and shares repurchased on the open market with the proceeds of the exercise price of stock options will not be available for issuance under the 2024 Plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is minimum of 12 months and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

15. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises and this is not the case.

Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

SPIRENT COMMUNICATIONS PLC AGM - 01-05-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee falls below the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income the Company follows the practice that dividends only being paid from the date awards vest onwards. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as one third of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. 14. Re-adoption of Long Term Incentive Plan ("LTIP")

The Board proposes the re-adoption of the long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Politicized De-Banking

Proponent's argument: Inspire Investing, LLC, a shareholder of the Company, requests that the Board conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "As shareholders of First Citizens BancShares, we believe it is essential for the company to provide financial services on an equal basis without regard to factors such as race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or social, political, or religious views. We are concerned with recent evidence of religious and political discrimination against customers by companies in the financial services industry, as seen in recent examples and the 2022 Statement on Debanking and Free Speech. When companies engage in this kind of discrimination, they hinder the ability of Americans to access the marketplace and instead become de facto regulators and censors. This undermines the fundamental freedoms of our country and is an affront to the public trust. Politicized debanking can also damage the company's reputation and ability to operate in favorable regulatory environments."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "It is not our policy or practice to terminate a relationship with a customer because of their political views or religion (including religious views), nor because of their race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or other factors further discussed below. This would be inconsistent with one of the three values in our statement of purpose: dedication to helping the people, companies, and institutions that rely on us, acting always with integrity, transparency, and respect. We have in place anti-discrimination and anti-harassment policies that are intended to promote equal opportunity and prevent discrimination and harassment. This prohibition covers not only the relationships between our associates, but also each associate's relationships with our customers. Adherence to these legal obligations may, under certain circumstances, require us to close accounts. Account closures that we determine are required by applicable law and regulations may give rise to false allegations that such account closures result from a policy or practice to terminate relationships with a customer because of their political views, religion or religious views. We have no such policy or practice. Further, the statement of purpose for the Code provides our associates with values to help guide their conduct and relationships with our customers and others. We are subject to comprehensive consolidated supervision, regulation, and examination, including customer due diligence guidance and the Bank Secrecy Act/Anti-Money Laundering legal and regulatory requirements. Adherence to these obligations sometimes requires denial of service or closure of accounts. Decisions to terminate or not terminate any accounts are made with management's careful consideration of legal, regulatory, and operational and other factors, and are handled with scrutiny and confidentiality."

PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company's policy on discrimination related risks allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company; including stakeholder relationship. However; this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints; including books that some customers may find objectionable; does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. This resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. The requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination Committee should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure.

The company has not only failed to set short, medium and long-term climate targets it also has made no overall commitment to being net zero by 2050 or earlier. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks for companies strategically important for the transition to net zero this failure to introduce any adequate targets is considered to be well below best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

2. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

There are concerns with the Plan as it has various elements bundled together, and although parts of it can benefit the majority of employees, it can still be used as a vehicle for potentially excessive executive payments. As performance conditions may be attached to awards at the Compensation Committee's discretion, there are concerns that the Committee will have considerable flexibility in the payout of discretionary awards and as a result awards may not be subject to robust enough performance targets, and be insufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of an non-financial performance

Maximum long-term award opportunities are not limited to 200% of base salary, which raises concerns over the potential excessiveness of the remuneration structure. The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

The Board is seeking approval to amend and restate the S&P Global Inc. Director Deferred Stock Ownership Plan to modify certain terms of the Director Plan to better align with Company policies and objectives. Specifically, if approved by our shareholders, the Director Plan will be amended primarily as follows: To impose an overall aggregate annual cap on the value of all compensation granted or paid to any individual for their service as a non-employee director with respect to any fiscal year of the Company, including cash fees paid by the Company and equity-based awards granted to such non-employee director, of $1,000,000, in lieu of the prescribed annual equity award value in the Director Plan previously.

Although it is commended to impose a cap on such awards, the Plan allows the administrator too much discretion to determine the term of awards. The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. 1.1. Re-elect David W. Faeder - Chair (Non Executive)

Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Member of the Audit and Nomination Committees. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. In terms of best practice, it is considered that the Nomination and Audit Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

Additionally, the articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. We welcome the possibility of hybrid meetings as a way to increase participation and transparency, however virtual-only meetings should not be used lightly and should be restricted only to cases where in-person attendance is impossible due to public health crisis or natural disasters.

Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. The Company uses only one performance metrics to determine the payout of performance awards. Instead of the use of a sole performance metric, it would be preferred that payout be linked to at least two or more performance metrics, with the inclusion of an non-financial performance criteria. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. 3. Approval of an amendment to CNA's certificate of incorporation to update the exculpation provision

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of the Company is amended, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significantly higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuade shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers.

UNILEVER PLC AGM - 01-05-2024

1. Receive the Annual Report

Strategic report meets guidelines. Adequate employment and environmental policies are in place and relevant, up-to-date, quantified, environmental reporting is disclosed. The Company also disclosed the proportion of women on the Board, in Executive Management positions and within the whole organisation.

Despite having climate targets, the company does have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and but does not have an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short-term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

Company does not report adequately on climate risk in the strategic report (or equivalent).

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The Company received significant opposition at the last AGM to its remuneration report. However, it is clear from Company reporting that adequate measures have been taken in order to address shareholder dissent. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no mitigation statement included within the remuneration policy. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a

4. Say on Climate

It is proposed that shareholders should decide annually on a consultative basis on the Company's Climate Strategy Report. This Report will be consistent with the recommendations of the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD). It will also include the evolution of emissions of the different business activities, facilities and assets over which the company maintains control, and will indicate annual progress with respect to the Greenhouse Gas Emissions Reduction Plan. The report on the climate strategy will be submitted each year to the ordinary general meeting.

Given the severity of the climate crisis, it is considered that companies should rely to every measure possible must be taken by investee companies to facilitate a net zero carbon transition, as well as to include shareholders and stakeholders in this process. With this respect, the Say on Climate mechanism is an important step in improving the quality and level of the disclosures and the company's plans to reduce them in line with its commitments. An advisory vote on the company's climate strategy, as well as a vote on the progresses made towards achieving the goals sets therein, is considered to be in the long-term interests of shareholders. The company has committed to being carbon neutral by 2050 and includes scopes 1, 2 and 3 emission reductions in this commitment. The company strategy appears to include an actual reduction of carbon emissions rather than having a heavy reliance on offsetting.

Disclosure

The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.

Despite having climate targets, the company does have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and but does not have an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. 14. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as Auditor of the Company

KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 7.94% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

PIRC issue: the current auditor has been in place for more than five years and there are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

It is proposed that the Restated Certificate of Incorporation of the Company is amended to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding officer exculpation. The Board seeks authority to amend the articles, to reflect new Delaware law provisions regarding the exculpation of officers. Article VII of the Company's Certificate of Incorporation (Certificate) currently provides for the Company to limit the monetary liability of directors in certain circumstances pursuant to and consistent with the Delaware General Corporation Law (DGCL). The State of Delaware recently amended Section 102(b)(7) of the DGCL to allow Delaware corporations to extend similar protections to officers. Specifically, the amendments to the DGCL allow Delaware corporations to exculpate their officers for personal liability for breaches of the duty of care in certain circumstances.

While efforts to align executive and non-executive liabilities and harmonize corporate articles are acknowledged, decisions taken by executives, may cause significantly higher losses compared to those taken by directors. While officers remain liable for lack of fiduciary duty due to wrongful actions committed wilfully, they would nevertheless be exculpated against direct actions, such as class actions. Shareholders could still act via derivative lawsuits, which are however more complex and less lucrative legal avenue since shareholders would bring an action in the name of the corporation and not in the name of shareholders. This could potentially dissuade shareholders from pursuing actions and entrench poorly performing officers. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. The annual incentive award made during the year under review is not considered to be overly excessive as it amounts to less than 200% of base salary. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards made up less than one-third of the awards granted to executives, which is considered best practice. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages. The compensation rating is: ACA. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

1. Receive the Annual Report

There are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported. Camden is recommended to oppose.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 500% of salary, for US Executives over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the peer comparator group (FTSE-350 Health Care). This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The total combined variable reward paid during the year falls below the 200% recommended threshold and is therefore not considered to be overly excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 8. Re-elect Rupert Soames - Chair (Non Executive)

Independent Non-Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders.

19. Approve New Executive Share Option Scheme/Plan

The Board proposes the approval of a Restricted Share Plan (RSP) for US Executive Directors. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

11. Appoint the Auditors: Grant Thornton UK LLP

Grant Thornton proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 26.67% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The articles of association include provisions allowing for the convening of virtual-only meetings. The decision to remove the ability for shareholders to attend meetings in person is significant and could potentially limit shareholder engagement and transparency. Virtual-only meetings may restrict the ability of shareholders to effectively participate, ask questions, and engage with company management and the board. Shareholders should carefully consider the implications of such amendments and advocate for practices that uphold shareholder rights and promote transparency in corporate governance. 13. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. The use of non-GAAP metrics prevents shareholders from being able to assess fully whether the performance targets are sufficiently challenging. The Company does not consider non-financial metrics in its assessment of performance. For the year under review, annual bonus payouts are considered to be excessive as they represent more than 200% of base salary. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance metrics are replicated under different incentive plans, raising concerns that executives are being rewarded twice for the same performance. Maximum long-term award opportunities are not limited to 200% of base salary, which raises concerns over the potential excessiveness of the remuneration structure. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is not aligned with peer group averages.

The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. Proponent's argument: The resolution being submitted by the National Center for Public Policy Research to the stockholders for approval. It is requested that: "the Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a civil rights and non-discrimination report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how Company's policies and practices impact employees and prospective employees based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and the risks those impacts present to Company's business." The request is supported with the following argument "Capital One (the "Company") employs more than 50,000 people. It should respect its employees' speech rights and religious freedom. Company legally must comply with many laws prohibiting discrimination against employees on many grounds, including religion and sometimes political affiliation. Respecting diverse views allows Company to attract the most qualified talent, promote a healthy and innovative business culture, and contribute to a healthy economic market and marketplace of ideas. Despite this, the Viewpoint Diversity Score Business Index (2023) found 91% of scored companies promote divisive training concepts like critical race theory (CRT) that replace rich cultural and ideological diversity with a monolithic focus on group identity. Capital One goes further, from training to practice. It appears to inject the illegal considerations of race and sex into every supplier-recruitment decision, and to offer training programs and growth opportunities exclusively to race, sex and orientation groups it favors, thus discriminating against "non- diverse" suppliers. And despite the fact that Capital One actively discriminates against disfavored "non-diverse" people such as whites, men and straight people, none of those groups is represented by any "business resource groups," while favored, "diverse" groups to whose benefit Company's discrimination runs have a series of surface-characteristic-based lobbying groups. This speaks to systemic discrimination at Capital One against the "non-diverse".

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Board argues that: "we are committed to maintaining a work environment that is free from all forms of unlawful discrimination. We strive to make Capital One a place where everyone feels seen, heard, and supported. We promote DIB awareness in order to make Capital One a place where each associate has an equal opportunity to succeed. We strive for pay equity among our associates and periodically review groups of associates in similar roles, accounting for factors that appropriately explain differences in pay such as job location and experience, and taking action to close gaps where needed. As outlined in the Capital One Code of Conduct available on our website at www.capitalone.com under "Investors," then "Governance & Leadership," then "Organizational and Governance Documents," unlawful discrimination is prohibited based on multiple criteria, including: race, color, national origin or citizenship; age; religion; physical or mental disability, or genetic information; sex, gender identity/reassignment or sexual orientation; veteran status; marital, pregnancy or maternity status; and any other status protected by applicable law."

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Director Election Resignation Bylaw Proposal

Proponent's argument: It is requested that: "that the board of directors take the necessary action to adopt a director election resignation bylaw that requires each director nominee to submit an irrevocable conditional resignation to the Company to be effective upon the director's failure to receive the required shareholder majority vote support in an uncontested election. The proposed resignation bylaw shall require the Board to accept a tendered resignation absent the finding of a compelling reason or reasons to not accept the resignation. Further, if the Board does not accept a tendered resignation and the director remains as a "holdover" director, the resignation bylaw shall stipulate that should a "holdover" director fail to be re-elected at the next annual election of directors, that director's new tendered resignation will be automatically effective 30 days after the certification of the election vote. The Board shall report the reasons for its actions to accept or reject a tendered resignation in a Form 8-K filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. The Board argues that: "to mitigate against concerns about having holdover directors on our Board, our Amended and Restated Corporate Governance Guidelines (our "Corporate Governance Guidelines") require, and our Amended and Restated Bylaws (our "Bylaws") permit, that any nominee for director in an uncontested election (i.e., an election where the only nominees are those nominated by our Board) who receives a greater number of votes "against" their election than votes "for" such election shall tender their resignation to the Chair of our Board within five business days following certification of the stockholder vote on the election of such director. Our Governance and Nominating Committee is required to consider the resignation offer and recommend to our Board whether to accept it. Our Board will then take action on the Governance and Nominating Committee's recommendation within 90 days following the submission of the director's resignation. We will then disclose our Board's decision and provide an explanation of its process and the factors it considered by way of a filing with the SEC. Any director who tenders their resignation as set forth above is expected to recuse themselves from the Governance and Nominating Committee recommendation or Board action regarding whether to accept such resignation. As described above, our governing documents already set forth a process that deals with the concerns raised in the proposal regarding holdover directors. The process provides a balanced approach that ensures our Board has appropriate discretion to act in the best interests of our Company and our stockholders to either accept a director's resignation or take any other action it deems necessary to address the concerns that led to the election results for that incumbent director. Since we adopted a majority voting standard in 2007, no director has received less than a majority of the votes cast for their election. Our Board takes seriously its responsibilities under our governing documents, and would carefully review whether to accept the resignation of an incumbent director who receives less than majority support, in accordance with our Corporate Governance Guidelines.".

PIRC analysis: While holdover directors can provide continuity and stability during periods of transition; prolonged periods without new leadership can sometimes lead to uncertainty or operational challenges. It is considered that holdover directors who fail to be re-elected should be required to resign and the Company should disclose the review process for resignations. Holdover directors are not aligned with best corporate governance best practice as they are considered to have the potential to entrench underperforming management and hinder board rotation as well as shareholder engagement. It is recommended that Camden oppose.

LOBLAW COMPANIES LIMITED AGM - 02-05-2024

1.3. Re-elect Christie J. B. Clark - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent due to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair.

The director chairs a committee which is not fully independent which does not meet Camden guidelines. Additionally, at the company, the Audit Committee does not oversee the whistle-blowing hotline. This may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalated which may mean the issue is concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

1.7. Re-elect M. Marianne Harris - Non-Executive Director

Non-Executive Director and member of the Audit, Governance and Pension Committees. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: Ms Harris stands on the Board of George Weston Ltd, which is the majority shareholder of the company. Ms Harris is also not considered independent as the director has a cross directorship with Cornell Wright, who also stands on the Board of George Weston Ltd. It is considered that the Audit, Governance and Pension Committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members.

The director chairs a committee which is not fully independent which does not meet Camden guidelines.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation

The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The Company included non-financial metrics into the annual bonus structure, which is considered best practice. Awards under the annual-incentive plans are tied to multiple performance conditions, which is considered best practice. Performance measures attached to long-term incentives do not duplicate those attached to other awards, which is considered acceptable practice. Retention awards make up a significant portion of the long-term incentives and therefore the scheme does not link pay to performance. Performance shares have a three-year performance period, which is a market standard. However, a five-year performance period is considered best practice. Executive compensation is aligned with peer group averages. In addition, executive compensation is aligned with companies of a similar market cap. The compensation rating is: ACE.

1.3. Re-elect N. Murray Edwards - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this.

Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. It is recommended that Camden abstain.

The Company uses adjusted performance metrics for most elements of compensation. LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. The maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP have not been adequately disclosed. Failure to provide the maximum potential reward leaves the schemes vulnerable to excessive pay-outs as well as being considered a frustration of shareholders accountability. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to at least 200% of salary, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

14. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor of the Company

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, Camden is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Dividend accrual has been separately categorised which is welcome. Awards granted to Directors under the Company's variable remuneration schemes are considered excessive as they exceeded 200% of base salary during the year under review. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group. This raises concerns over potential excessiveness of the variable incentive schemes currently in operation, as the base salary determines the overall quantum of the remuneration structure. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee exceeds the recommended limit of 20:1 and is therefore not considered appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Directors are entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on share awards from the date of grant, once the awards vest. Dividend should be paid from the date awards vest onwards, and not backdated to the time of grant to include the performance period. A welcome addition to the LTIP scheme is the use of non-financial performance metrics as a means of assessing individual performance. The use of non-financial conditions enables the policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole as well as the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Maximum potential awards for both the Annual Bonus and LTIP are clearly stated. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. A mitigation statement has been made which seeks to limit the amount of any payment or benefits provided to a Director upon leaving the Company should alternative employment be secured. Vesting scales are considered to be sufficiently broad and geared towards better performance. Total potential awards capable of vesting under the policy exceed the recommended threshold of 200% of the highest paid Director's base salary. Directors are required to build a holding equivalent to 300% of basic salary for the Group CEO and 225% of basic salary for other executives, over a period of no more than five years. It is considered that a shareholding policy aligns the interests of the Executive to that of the shareholder. The Annual Bonus is deferred. Claw-back provisions are attached to the annual bonus. The deferral period attached to the Annual Bonus is in line with best practice as half of the bonus is deferred in shares over at least two years. The performance period for the LTIP is less than five years and is therefore not considered sufficiently long-term. Claw-back provisions are in place over long-term incentive plans. However, recipients of the award are required to hold their vested shares for at least a further two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a

18. Appoint Ernst & Young LLP as Auditor of the Company

EY proposed as new auditor. Auditor rotation is considered a positive factor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the 'expectations gap' in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is 'useful to users'. That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being 'useful for users', a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the 'expectations gap' being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

22. Authorise Issue of Equity in Relation to Any Issuance of SII Instruments

Authority is sought to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into ordinary shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP150,000,000, representing approximately 16.27% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital as at 13 March 2024, such authority to be exercised in connection with the issue of Solvency II (SII) instruments. The authority expires at the next AGM. The Company explains that this authority is needed so that the Company has the flexibility to manage and maintain the Group's capital structure more effectively in the light of evolving regulatory capital requirements, market conditions and appetite for different instruments and their cost-effectiveness. It is noted that these SII instruments include Tier 1 instruments such as Equity Convertible Instruments or ECIs. The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price.

15. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as Auditor of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2.06% of audit fees during the year under review and 5.84% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them.
